Inferior Tanks;
Less Firepower

He handed over my change and said: "I hear our tanks got knocked out in Korea. Why didn't Truman spend the money to have us ready?" I spoke softly though wrath was by no means turned away thereby.

Tanks

Our tanks got knocked out in Korea for the same reason they got knocked out in the second world war.

The Russian tanks are better. We put some tanks almost as good into action in the tail-end of the last war. But even they are not in Korea.

Our best tank in general use has a 90-mm gun. The best Russian tank has a 120-mm gun.

In the second world war our Pershing tanks which we put into action in the tail-end of the last war, did not do too well against the German tanks. Ours had a 90-mm gun, the Germans an 88-mm. Ours had a shorter barrel and inferior armor.

Since the end of that war the Russians have produced, and are yet turning out in great numbers, a tank with the 120-mm weapon. Our best, for present use, is still the 90-mm, not as good as the 88 with longer barrel and more armor.

Ask any American tank fighter who was at Normandy where the German tanks could knock ours out before they got into range with their own guns. Our armor and our firepower were never as good. Kasserine Pass was a similar story.

German and Russian mortars and self-propelled guns also are superior to ours. The Russian tactics demand vast numbers of these weapons.

Humility

We could use some humility, because until we get it we will never quite draw the picture as it is and realize that there is a direct connection between taxes, and military designs.

No one means to cast aspersions on American preparedness. But we need to know why things happen.

It is not new. Gen. Pierre Gustav Toutant Beaugard had two rifled cannons at Fort Sumter. He was trying to get others rifled. The Confederate War Department said the smooth bores were superior. The Federal War Department was at backward. At the end of the Civil War there were few rifled cannons in use on either side and most of these were improvisations by local commanders.

The Japanese killed our troops with a mortar which had a round plate. The Russians had used it for years. We have adopted it.

Other nations have taken many of our developments, and then are fields in which we have always had a marked superiority. But we need to rid our minds of the deadly poison of thousands of Fourth of July patriots and the narrow pride of provincial thought which says, "We have the best of everything."

Axioms

You can take two military axioms—Forrest's, "Get there first with the most," and Napoleon's, "God is on the side of the heaviest battalions"—and cover the tactics of war. Put them together and they read, "To win, get there first with the most men and firepower."

In Korea, we have neither and we are up against troops blooded and trained, with the most men, the most firepower, and the best weapons. They also are at a fever pitch of morale, since they are defeating Americans.

We'll win this engagement. We have to win it.

We'll win it when we get the most men there and provide them with superior fire power, but it is a great pity we could not win it quickly.

The Russians, who do not have to pay any attention to budgets, taxes or expenses—since their money is a domestic money only—have another advantage. An order is an order. No one questions it or debates it. There is no congress to argue. No one runs for office in Russia. That has a certain immediate advantage. In the long run it is not so much help. Now it is.

We do have taxes, budgets, and pressure groups, and Congress—with elections coming up in the fall and some who put election above country.

We retreat and suffer more casualties than we should because we have fewer men, inferior tanks, less fire power.

State Plans For A-Bomb Defense Job

Gen. Vandiver Sets
Training School
Here Sept. 15-17

Citizens of Georgia, who learned to blackout their cities and homes against air raids in World War II, soon will be trained in defense methods against atom bombs.

This was revealed late Tuesday by Adj.-Gen. Ernest Vandiver, who heads every phase of military preparedness in Georgia, after Gov. Talmadge instructed him to lay the groundwork for civilian defense.

Vandiver announced a school will be held here Sept. 15, 16, 17 to train representatives of the 30 largest cities in atomic warfare defense so they may set up local defense organizations.

Anticipating the need for such training and moving ahead of schedule, the State Military Department already has sent a professor and a doctor to schools to take special courses in atomic-warfare defense.

Col. Frank Kopf, former Tech professor and retired Army officer who has just completed his course in atomic defense at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Tuesday was named co-ordinator for the proposed new Georgia Citizens Defense Corps by Vandiver.

Dr. Bernard Wolf, of Atlanta, who was sent to the University of Alabama to study atomic medicine upon the recommendations of the Georgia Medical Association, will help conduct the school for civilian leaders here in September.

Actual establishment of Civilian Defense Corps in the cities will await passage of legislation next January, Vandiver said.

Bills are ready for introduction in the General Assembly which will create a State Civilian Defense Board, composed of one representative from each congressional district. Each representative on the State board also would be in charge of the corps in the cities within his district.

Vandiver said this would centralize the control of the Civilian Defense Corps within the Military Department. In World War II, the Civilian Defense Corps was under the Executive Department and was directed by civilians.

The new corps will face many problems which the World War II corps didn't have, Vandiver said. It must plan for the relief and teach the people the best methods of atomic defense.

The Civilian Defense Corps will be activated as soon as the General Assembly passes the necessary legislation, Vandiver said.

In the meantime, Vandiver is drafting plans to re-establish the State Guard. This outfit replaced the National Guard when it was called into Federal service during World War II. It will not be activated again unless the National Guard leaves the State for active duty, Vandiver said.

Centrality in the Military Department, Gov. Talmadge named Vandiver as chief of the State Guard for the present. Vandiver also is State Director of Selective Service, head of the National Guard, and in charge of the proposed Civilian Defense setup.

Already part of a nation-wide preparedness program, Vandiver is a member of a committee from five Seaboard States which will confer with Stuart Symington, Chairman of the National Securities Resources Board, in Washington July 25, to continue working out plans for defense. He attended a conference in New York City recently to discuss defense problems. Since then, he has obtained copies of civilian-defense plans from many States throughout the Nation.

Soaring State Toll Spurs Safety Drive

An immediate, three-point emergency program to cut the rising number of traffic deaths in Georgia was urged here Tuesday.

Noting that 334 persons were killed in Georgia traffic accidents in the first five months of this year (53 more than in the same period last year), James D. Hill, Field Representative for the National Safety Council, recommended:

1. A "real, permanent, honest-to-God crackdown" in law enforcement on all levels—especially in smaller cities and rural areas.
2. Strict and honest application of the law in courts by judges and juries.
3. Expanded use of driver's license restrictions against repeat offenders and flagrant traffic-law violators.

Addressing a meeting of the Georgia Safety Council and the Governor's Highway Safety Coordinating Committee, Hill pointed out:

"Traffic accidents last year killed 738 people in Georgia and caused injury to 25,000 more. Georgia citizens suffered an out-of-pocket cash loss of $34,500,000 because of the accidents."

Hill emphatically declared: "Officials and people of Georgia must decide whether they will pay their way through the motor age by death or discipline."

He said juries must quit looking at drunken drivers and mumbled to themselves: "There but for the grace of God go I."

He said traffic officers, judges and juries should treat "big shots" and "little shots" alike and strictly apply the law.

In a complete analysis or inventory of Georgia's traffic safety activities in 1949, Hill pointed out:

Georgia ranked forty-fourth in the Nation in over-all traffic safety effort.

Of the 738 persons killed, 127 would have been spared if the effectiveness of Georgia's safety program had been average.

Of the 738 persons killed, 491 would have been spared if Georgia's program had been as good as the best in the Nation.

Hill said the weakest phase of Georgia's safety program was the traffic legislation which he termed the "poorest in the South."

He said the State ranked forty-seventh in traffic legislation.

He recommended a comprehensive survey of traffic legislation needs, sponsored by the Georgia Safety Council, the Governor's Highway Safety Coordinating Committee and an interim committee.

Warm, Wet, Weather Fret

Atlanta, along with the rest of the State, is in for two days more of... "considerably cloudy, warm and humid" weather, accompanied by scattered showers or thunderstorms.

Such is the official forecast for both Wednesday and Thursday.

A high reading of 85 is expected Wednesday after a morning's low of 69. Thursday, the weatherman said, it will be slightly warmer, with the thermometer due to rise to 87 degrees after a dip to 69.

Scattered showers were reported Tuesday in a wide belt extending northward from South Georgia through the middle sections of South and North Carolina. Slight, less than one-half inch of rain fell in Atlanta Tuesday, the Weather Bureau reported at midnight, most of it coming after 7:30 p. m.

U.S. Warned Of Struggle- Long, Bloody

Senator's Report
On Korea Dismal

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
Special to The New York Times and the Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, July 11—The American people were warned Tuesday to be prepared for a long, bloody and difficult operation in Korea and to accept the possibility of yet more Soviet-inspired military action in other parts of the world.

This was the official estimate of the position given by Chairman Tydings in behalf of the entire Senate armed services committee after it had held a two-hour consultation with Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Sen. Tydings, a Maryland Democrat, disclosed at the same time that other members of the United Nations had made offers, which had been accepted, of ground troops to aid the American forces struggling with the North Korean Communists.

He did not identify these nations, nor did he indicate the size of the troop elements that would come forward.

"It was said in another responsible quarter that they could hardly be more than token forces, for the time being at least, but their prospective arrival in the Korean line was nevertheless deeply welcomed as an earnest reminder that the Korean war was in every sense a United Nations war against an aggressor."

It was understood that among nations volunteering to dispatch men to serve under the United Nations flag were several Latin American countries. Whether there would be units from among the British Commonwealth or other Western nations was not disclosed.

Gen. Bradley, the highest military authority of the United States, went before the committee at 10 a. m. and talked until noon. There was some discussion, just before the meeting broke up, as to what should be told the public.

The consensus of the members was that the announcement, in the words of one Senator, should "put it right on the line." When Gen. Bradley was asked his opinion, it was stated, he concurred with the others around the table that no effort be made to soften what was to be said.

Sen. Tydings then roughly drafted and read to reporters the following statement:

"The Armed Services Committee has met to hear from Gen. Bradley and have the military situation brought up to date. It has been the Committee's custom periodically to have orientation conferences with the joint chiefs of staff."

"The meeting this morning, however, was a special meeting."

"The other joint chiefs were not present because of absence from the United States or because they were otherwise occupied. Gen. Bradley discussed the Korean situation."

WINS IN CAROLINA
James F. Byrnes

Byrnes In Easily; Johnston Has Lead

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 11—(U.P.)—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes won easy nomination as South Carolina Governor Tuesday night and Sen. Olin D. Johnston, Democrat, South Carolina, apparently saved his seat against the States' Rights challenge of Gov. J. Strom Thurmond.

With the last several hundred precincts being counted in the Democratic primary, Johnston, who wants to fight the Fair Deal within the party, clung to a lead he had held since the half-way mark.

Returns from 1,255 of the State's 1,570 precincts gave Johnston 15,448 votes and Thurmond 107,433. Byrnes, piling up almost 150,000 votes, was so far ahead of three opponents that the closest conceded his majority.

Johnston arrived at his hotel headquarters here late Tuesday and predicted his final margin would be 20,000 to 25,000 votes. His supporters flocked around and began generating a victory party.

Thurmond's press secretary, George MacNabb, said however: "This thing is a long ways from over yet."

Observers believe that Byrnes, one-time New Deal confidante and President Roosevelt's "Assistant President," will attempt to form a "Governors' front" against the Fair Deal, with which he has broken over spending and the welfare program.

Even if Johnston was the victor, the administration could take little heart because he has denounced its domestic policies as bitterly as Thurmond.

In two previous Southern primaries anti-Fair Dealers George Smathers in Florida and Willis Smith in North Carolina were nominated over incumbent liberal Senators.

A Congressman regarded as a moderate Truman supporter, Rep. Hugo Sims, who voted for FEPC to come to the floor, was trailing former Rep. John Riley.

Returns from 172 of the Second District's 254 precincts gave Sims 10,798 votes to Riley's 11,176.

Rep. James Butler Hare, of the Third District, also was running behind former Rep. William J. Bryan Dorn. Rep. Joseph Bryson was well ahead of Matthew Polakoff for the Fourth District seat, and in the First District Rep. L. Mendel Rivers showed under Negro candidate A. J. Clement.

Gov. Thurmond, seeking to carry on the "Dixiecrat" revolt in the Senate, had led from the start of the vote counting almost to the hour when Johnston suddenly spurted in front.

Thurmond picked up 39 States' Rights electoral votes in 1948 but failed to split the South enough to insure President Truman's defeat.

Johnston has remained technically loyal to the National Party, while denouncing the Administration's Civil Rights policies as loudly as Thurmond.

Both candidates raised the racial cry and each accused the other of wooing Negro votes.

444 Georgians Slated For First Draft Call

Georgia's quota for the Nation's 20,000-man draft call has been fixed at 444, State Selective Service headquarters announced Tuesday night.

The disclosure came as Selective Service headquarters in Washington fixed the State quotas and ordered local boards to start inductions moving to Army camps "no later than Sept. 30."

Responding swiftly to the manpower call issued Monday by the Army, Draft Director Maj. Lewis B. Hershey sent telegrams to 54 State and territorial directors advising each of his quota.

Inductions should begin "as soon as possible," Hershey wired.

The State Selective Service headquarters here disclosed that

Retreat Halted at Kum River

Barbaric Acts

By HOWARD HANDLEMAN

TOKYO, July 12 (Wednesday)—(INS)—Exhausted and outnumbered U. S. troops who lost their first tank battle of the Korean war and were hurled back 10 miles retreated to the Kum River Wednesday at a point only about 18 miles from Taejon, vital supply city.

The bulk of one American force even may have retreated behind the Kum River line, last natural barrier before Taejon.

Gen. MacArthur announced that documentary proof has been received of North Korean acts of "barbarity and murder of American prisoners of war."

"I am astounded by these barbaric acts," he said and he added he would hold North Korean leadership responsible for permitting "these uncivilized acts."

MacArthur's statement was made after official photographs were received showing the bodies of four American soldiers whose hands had been bound and who had been shot in the head.

A front headquarters dispatch relayed through Tokyo at 12:42 p. m. reiterated a spokesman's announcement that U. S. troops are "still holding" at Kongju, which is 18 miles northwest of Taejon.

Kongju actually is a mile south of the curving Kum River. Although American troops are believed to be above the river at this point the statement also could mean that the bulk of that particular group has withdrawn across the highway bridge over the Kum.

The troops also were reported holding out in a dispatch telephoned at 9:35 a. m. at Chochiwon, which is five miles north of the Kum River and 14 air miles northeast of Kongju.

An Army spokesman in Washington said the U. S. lost 10 tanks.

The spokesman said two Russian-made Yaks had been sighted far over on the left flank of invaded Southern Korea. He reported the Yaks bombed Kusan several days ago, apparently severing the railroad which leads from that Yellow Sea port to Taejon.

Kusan is at the mouth of the Han River on the sea and 44 miles southwest of Taejon.

An enemy broadcast said that on the northeastern front, U. S. troops had captured Umsong, 12 miles west of fallen Chunju.

The Far East Air Forces Command announced in its afternoon communique that Allied planes destroyed six enemy tanks and 51 trucks and met fighter opposition from Russian-made Yak planes for the first time in over a week.

The Army spokesman said North Korean troops still held Chunju, the bitterly contested city 51 air miles northeast of Taejon. The Chunju battle is between South Koreans and the Northern Communist forces.

Front dispatches originally telling of the retreat southward along the Chonan-Kongju-Taejon road said the Americans were going into "pre-arranged positions," presumably meaning near the Kum River. The river presently is swollen to a varying width of 300 to 400 yards.

Unofficial estimates said the North Koreans were pressing their offensive with some 80 tanks and approximately 75,000 troops.

Field dispatches which told of the new retreat, posing the gravest threat so far to Taejon, emergency South Korean capital, also reported that five of seven U. S. tanks in the battle were destroyed and their crews apparently killed.

Four of the doomed tanks were mired in rice paddies, but crewmen kept their guns blazing until their ammunition was exhausted. Then the North Korean armor

News Merger Outlined By Atlanta Editors

Bryan and McGill Explain
Policies at Kiwanis Lunch

The economic merger of The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal has sharpened the competitive spirit between the two newspapers, their editors told the Atlanta Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

The broadened economic base two properties. Not only this, but from which the two newspapers now operate has meant more editorial and news space in which to carry on the battle for reader interest, they said.

They quoted Gov. James M. Cox, Chairman of the Board of the new company, as saying he not only would insist but demand that each newspaper retain its identity as a separate, local institution.

Editor Ralph McGill, of The Constitution, quoted Gov. Cox as having told him he thought the great error the well-known newspaper chains have made has been the attempt to impose over-all direction in news and editorial policies.

McGill said Gov. Cox was of the opinion such a practice not only was unhealthy from the standpoint of the public good, but was bad business.

If the men now at the head of The Journal and The Constitution do not maintain a fearless, vigorous editorial and news policy, they'll have to go, McGill said Cox told him.

In this attitude Clark Howell, Publisher of The Constitution and Vice Chairman of the Board of the new company, is in complete agreement, McGill said.

Editor Wright Bryan, of The Atlanta Journal, told a viewpoint expressed by Gov. Cox at the first meeting of the Board of the new company.

Bryan quoted Gov. Cox as saying in effect: That the first thing the directors must do is be mindful of the great traditions of the

Grove Park Asks Voiding Of Plot Sale

Grove Park citizens are up in arms against the Fulton County Commission for breaking what was termed a "gentleman's agreement" in selling 44½ acres of County property at West Lake and Simpson Streets to a real estate operator.

Approximately 150 members of the Grove Park Civic League meeting at the Lena H. Cox School Tuesday night, were unanimous in their approval of a motion to form a committee of citizens to meet with the Commission to see if the sale, approved by a 3-2 vote last week, couldn't be nullified.

Spokesmen for the League said the group feared the sale of the disputed property for $28,500 to Fred B. Wilson, of Atlanta, would open the way for Negro encroachment of the neighborhood.

Commissioner James H. Aldridge, who told the League he voted against the sale, pointed out that the Commission's approval of the sale virtually closed the matter as far as that body was concerned.

J. F. Cloud, who was named Chairman of the protest committee, explained that the property was sold to the County in 1941 by the West Side Development Company "it was for the construction of an alms house, and we understood from the Commission that we would get a chance to buy it back if it were not used for that purpose," he said.

Other citizens voiced the complaint that the commissioners had from time to time promised that the property would not be sold without the consent of Grove Park citizens.

GREATER ATLANTA ROUNDUP

37 Candidates Seek DeKalb Ordinary Post

By GORDON SAWYER

A platoon of men and two women have jumped into DeKalb County's Ordinary. A total of 34 citizens had qualified to run for the recently-vacated post of Ordinary when deadline time passed Tuesday night.

The office will be filled at a special election July 28, a bare two weeks away. Candidates were already filling the streets and business houses with campaign cards Tuesday, covering some of the left-over literature from the recent primary.

The position, which pays $6,000, was vacated by the death of Judge V. S. Morgan.

Those entered in the race are: Oscar Mitchell, Charles Doss Livsey, Gray Skelton, John E. Verner, Charles G. Wheeler, Mercer F. Stanley, Jr., R. Inman Ragsdale, William Schley Howard, Jr., Matthew S. Hazelrigs, Myron M. Armistead, E. T. Hendon, Jr., Vernon R. Frank, Henry E. Nelson, K. L. Vandiver, J. Lex Young, Joe Allen, Almond Carroll, Dr. Frank Newman, Walter E. Egan, Olin E. Scott, J. FEARED KIDNAPED—Three-year-old Joyce Joan Shouse missing since Friday night, is the object of wide-spread search. She is believed to have been kidnaped from a cafe where her mother was drinking.

Truman Names John Peurifoy Greek Envoy

WASHINGTON, July 11—(AP)—Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy was nominated by President Truman Tuesday to be Ambassador to Greece. He also will head the American Aid Mission to that country.

Peurifoy has had charge of the State Department's security and loyalty program which has been under attack by Sen. McCarthy, Republican, Wisconsin.

The White House announcement of Peurifoy's new assignment, however, gave no explanation for the shift of jobs.

The nomination must be confirmed by the Senate. That raises the question whether Republicans might seek to block the appointment in view of the controversy over McCarthy's charges that the State Department is a haven for Communist sympathizers.

Peurifoy, a South Carolinian, is a career diplomat.

Mr. Truman nominated Carlisle H. Humelsine, of Maryland, to succeed him.

Truman Signs Air Force Bill

WASHINGTON, July 11—(AP)—President Truman Tuesday signed a bill authorizing a combat Air Force of 70 groups, but carrying no appropriation to finance it.

The legislation sets top limits on manpower and aircraft for the Army and the Air Force. Actual strength is determined, within the authorized limitations, by Congressional appropriations.

The bill was a moral victory for House members who have been clamoring for a 70-group Air Force. President Truman has insisted the Nation could not afford that large an Air Force at this time.

Since group sizes are variable, there is no way of determining how many planes are involved.

Present Air Force strength is about 48 first-line groups.

In the lady's voice was mingled disappointment at the prospect of a ruined afternoon and hope that somehow Davison's Iris Lee would save the day. This is only one example of the S.O.S.'s that pour in daily from our friends all over Atlanta and Georgia... sometimes touching, sometimes funny... all extremely flattering because of their implicit faith that to Davison's all things are possible. It's all in a day's work for Iris Lee to whip up a vacation wardrobe in just one lunch hour for a career girl going to Bermuda—to ransack the Toy Department to make Christmas-in-July for a little boy in the hospital—to advise a weeping bride how to make biscuits rise (we suggested baking powder)—to dig up a new hamburger recipe for a teen-ager entertaining "Six Hungry Wolves"—to assure a bewildered maid that the knives do go on the right, the forks on the left. Absent-minded husbands are our special proteges... and we're told that our Birthday-Anniversary Reminder Service has put "For Rent" signs on many a dog-house. Occasionally we get the $64 question, like the letter from a Tulsa lady who had heard of Davison's friendly services and requested a new suit—"gratis, please!" Living up to their combined role of Santa Claus-Emily-Post-and-glorified-good-neighbor is quite a job, even for experts like Iris Lee and her staff. But we think the measure of their success is revealed in this typically heart-warming letter that turned up in our mail bag recently:

DEAR IRIS LEE: SISTER'S FORMAL ARRIVED JUST IN TIME FOR THE BIG DANCE—THANKS FOR AVERTING ANOTHER FAMILY CRISIS! PLEASE ALWAYS KEEP US UNDER YOUR WING...

Facing Jail, Atlantan Kills Self

Despite pleas of his elderly grandparents and a minister, a 21-year-old Brookhaven painter Tuesday night fired a .22-caliber automatic rifle through his brain to avoid arrest on minor charges, DeKalb County police said.

Listed as Word Ray Wasson, Jr., alias "Junior House," he was pronounced dead upon arrival at Emory University Hospital.

Wasson barricaded himself in the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Heuse, at 3711 Ostanilla Dr., Brookhaven, and shouted threats to kill himself or anyone who attempted to arrest him, P. H. C. Rowden and Leroy Hicks said.

"I slipped around to the kitchen window and I could see him sitting at the table with an automatic rifle across his knees," Rowden said. "There just wasn't any means of reaching him."

The Rev. Hoyt Thomas, a Brookhaven minister, pleaded with Wasson vainly, patrolmen said. His grandfather made one last plea and then returned to the front porch as the waiting police heard gunfire.

Wasson was slumped forward by the kitchen table, Rowden and Hicks related. They said a bullet from the rifle blasted through the left side of his head and emerged on the right side.

Wasson was taken into custody at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday, but broke away from police en route to the patrol car and escaped.

P. L. B. Mothershead and A. H. Smith said they received a call to 1739 Carterway Dr. in Brookhaven and found Wasson and Henry Grady McDaniel fighting in an automobile.

The car, driven by McDaniel, had rammed into a parked machine, patrolmen related. They said they placed both men under arrest and transferred McDaniel to the police car. Wasson broke away, they said, and dashed into a wooded area shouting: "I'll kill myself before going to jail."

After the painter escaped, Mothershead and Smith returned to Decatur and obtained warrants for his arrest for drunk on a public highway, resisting arrest and fighting.

Rowden and Hicks went to the home of Wasson's grandparents and found him barricaded in the kitchen.

Wasson handed a suicide note to his grandfather before shooting himself, patrolmen said. They added a second, scrawled on a piece of cardboard, was found near his body.

DeKalb Coroner S. D. Warren launched an investigation. The body was taken to the A. S. Turner & Son Funeral Home.

Winecoff Plans Passed as Safe

Atlanta's Building Code Advisory Committee has approved plans to make the old Winecoff Hotel building a fire safe structure, but only after George Bond, Committee Chairman, warned that the eyes of every building official in the nation is watching developments.

Bond said "we cannot afford to make a mistake in setting up requirements for this structure." In December, 1946, the Winecoff was gutted and 119 persons lost their lives.

Peachtree on Peachtree, Inc., new owners of the structure, may build an exterior fire escape in the recessed south portion of the building and install a sprinkler system throughout or it may construct an enclosed stairway which will empty into the mezzanine floor, under the alternatives allowed by the board.

Representatives of the new owners said they do not yet know which would be preferable, but added the company expects to spend in excess of $200,000 in remodeling the structure. T. C. Wesley & Company is the contractor.

Atlanta merchants donated her new traveling outfit.

Former POW Killed Here as Car Hits Pole

A former World War II medical corps staff sergeant was killed around 6 a. m. Tuesday when his car struck a utility pole at Constitution and Jonesboro Roads, S. E., Fulton County police reported.

The victim was Charles K. Jackson, 26, of 325 Springside Dr., S. E. Police said the man was pinned inside his demolished machine until a wrecker could pull it free. A Grady intern pronounced him dead.

Relatives said Jackson, a service station manager, was held prisoner by the Germans for eight months before the end of the war. His survivors include his wife and two-year-old daughter, Iana the Kay.

Fulton Police Lt. H. L. Duncan and P. L. A. Adams, Sr., quoted a witness as saying the driver lost control of the car while traveling south on Jonesboro Road. The crash followed an early morning shower, they added.

They said the machine struck the pole broadside, almost wrapping itself around the pole. Early effort to free the man with a hacksaw were unsuccessful.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at Orchard Knob Baptist Church. The Rev. L. V. Bradley, Jr., will officiate and burial will be in Hill Crest Cemetery.

Surviving also are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Jackson; seven sisters, Mrs. J. R. Morrow, Misses Fay and Anne Jackson, Mrs. Novie Callaway, Mrs. Doris Patterson, Mrs. Mildred Hambree and Mrs. Jimmy Guzzo; seven brothers, Lloyd, Horace, Frank, Roy, Troy, Dan and Don Jackson; grandmother, Mrs. S. T. Jackson, and several nieces and nephews.

H. R. Butler Dies, Retired Engineer

Harvey Roy Butler, 60, retired railroad engineer, died Sunday night at a local hospital of a sudden illness. He resided at 2253 East Lake Rd.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the chapel of Henry M. Blanchard & Son. The Rev. L. H. Miller will officiate and burial will be in West View Cemetery.

Born at Estell Springs, Ala., in 1890, Mr. Butler attended schools there. He came to Atlanta more than 38 years ago.

Mr. Butler was an engineer on Atlanta & West Point Railroad for over 40 years. He was a member of Oakhurst Baptist Church, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and of the Masonic Lodge at Montgomery, Ala.

Surviving are his wife; a son, James H. Butler, of Atlanta; two daughters, Miss Margie Butler, of Atlanta, and Mrs. John E. Callen, of Sioux City, Iowa; a brother, F. E. Butler, of Grange; a sister, Mrs. J. R. O'Brien, of Selma, Ala., and a grandson, James H. Butler, of Atlanta.

Play Opens Today For Checker Title

Play for the 1950 Georgia Checker championship begins at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Jonesboro Consolidated School, according to Georgia Checker Association Pres. J. W. Welsh, of College Park.

The eight finalists, chosen in eliminations held Monday and Tuesday, include Defending Champion W. Q. Gresham, of Milner; Perry Fain, of Smyrna; Grady Traylor, of LaGrange; Denton Tribble, of Monroe; Webster Skelton, of Atlanta; A. S. Mitchell, of East Point; R. A. Armstrong, of Macon, and G. G. Payne, of Warner Robbins.

Gunshot Kills L. M. Markey, Ex-Atlantan

Lawrence Morris Markey, 51, former Atlanta newspaper reporter, died Monday night of a gunshot wound at his home in Halifax, Va.

Dr. N. H. Wooding, Halifax County, Va., Coroner, late Tuesday issued an open verdict in which he said death was from a "cause not determined." He said his investigation had not revealed sufficient facts to render a verdict of homicide, suicide or accidental death.

Both Dr. Wooding and Commonwealth's Attorney Frank L. McKinney said their investigation was complete unless "other evidence shows up."

Dr. Wooding said the body was found in a downstairs hall and that a .22-caliber rifle lay nearby, one cartridge fired from it. He said that no one saw what happened.

Funeral and burial services for the well-known newspaperman, magazine writer, author, and war correspondent will be held in Scottsburg, Va.

Born in Alexandria, Va., Markey attended John Marshall High School at Richmond. In 1921 he married Helen Turman, of Atlanta.

Markey was formerly a reporter for The Atlanta Journal, Newark, N. J., Ledger, New York Daily News, and New York World. In 1925 he joined the staff of New Yorker magazine, where he worked until 1933.

Markey, who had just completed a series of articles for Holiday Magazine, had contributed material to Redbook, Liberty, and McCall's magazines. He also had been a screen writer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In 1943, he was an accredited war correspondent with the U. S. Navy and served in the Pacific and North African theaters of war.

During World War I, he served with the American Red Cross in France. He was a Democrat and was listed in Who's Who in America.

Markey is the author of three books, the latest of which will come off the presses later this summer. His other two works are "The Band Plays Dixie" and "Well Done."

He moved to Halifax in December from New York City where he had been a free-lance writer.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Miss Sue Markey; his mother, Mrs. I. G. Markey, of Scottsburg, Va.; a brother, Marvin Markey, of Harrisburg, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Kate Vaughn, of Scottsburg.

'Buddy' De Sylva Dies in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, July 11—(AP)—George "Buddy" de Sylva, 54, noted song writer and former production head of Paramount Pictures, died Tuesday at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital of a heart ailment.

De Sylva had been in ill health since suffering a heart attack nearly five years ago.

He had composed more than 500 songs, among them "Avalon," "California, Here I Come" and "Sonny Boy."

Two years ago the producer became involved in a sensational paternity suit and the court ordered him to pay $650 monthly for the support of his illegitimate son, born to his former secretary, Marie Ballentine.

De Sylva, in addition to writing songs, produced dozens of shows and films and made several fortunes in executive work in motion pictures.

Dean Named To Head Atomic Commission

WASHINGTON, July 11—(UP)—President Truman ended his five-month search for a new permanent chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission Tuesday by choosing one of the present commissioners, 44-year-old Gordon Dean.

Associated Press Wirephoto
NEW AEC CHAIRMAN
Gordon Dean

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said formal orders promoting Dean will be issued "soon." Senate confirmation is not required.

Ross also disclosed that Mr. Truman is about ready to name a fifth member to the Commission which remains one member under strength because the new chairman was not brought in from outside. He indicated the nomination will go to the Senate later this week.

Dean, a native of Seattle, is a former law partner of Sen. Brien McMahon, Democrat, Connecticut, chairman of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

He was first named to the Commission on May 9, 1949, and was recently reappointed to a three-year term ending June 30, 1953. He has served as acting chairman for the past two weeks during the absence of Sumner T. Pike, whose reappointment was held up by a Senate fight.

Pike was confirmed, 55 to 24, Monday and will return to the Commission late this week.

The top post in the vital $5,000,000 atomic program has been vacant since last February 15, when David E. Lillenthal retired as chairman.

Reduction in Polio Incidence Encourages Georgia Doctors

Here's good news for Georgia parents: Polio incidence in the State has shown a sharp reduction this year—and chances are there will be no epidemic of the dread crippling disease here.

Dr. W. J. Murphy, State Epidemiologist, said only 28 cases of polio had been reported in Georgia to date, as compared with 44 at the same time last year.

Jesse Draper, Chairman of the Georgia Chapter, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said the polio cases reported to date were well scattered over the State. He said Fulton County has had six cases, and DeKalb County has had three.

Miss Katherine Pope, Supervisor of the Polio Ward at Grady Hospital, said "only five" polio victims were hospitalized there at the present time.

The two latest patients admitted are three-year-old Sandra Jean Puckett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Puckett, of 213 Monument Ave., S. E., and 15-year-old Betty Jane Price, of 204 Rockbridge Rd., Pine Lake.

Miss Pope said both patients were in "fair" condition late Tuesday.

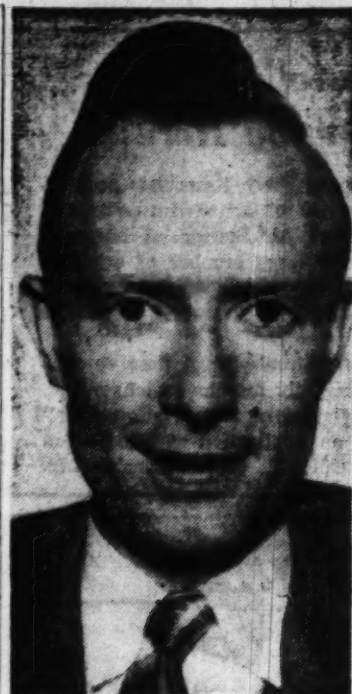

Polio Halts Play After Two Deaths

WYTHEVILLE, Va., July 11—(AP)—The recreation program here was closed down for at least two weeks following the death Monday in Roanoke's Memorial and Crippled Children's Hospital of two Wythe County polio victims.

Twelve definite cases of polio, including the two who died, have been reported in Wythe. Two additional suspected cases were taken to the Roanoke hospital Monday night.

The two who died Monday were 20-year-old A. L. Burton, Jr., and nine-year-old Clifton Wade Harman.

Finance Problem Seen For Juvenile Courts

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles on newly nominated members of the General Assembly.)

Financing the newly created system of Juvenile Courts will be a major problem of the General Assembly next January, Rep. Robert L. Scoggin, of Floyd County, points out.

Scoggin, who won a special election last year to fill the unexpired term of Rep. Vaughn Terrell, won renomination in a seven-man race for Floyd's three seats recently.

Scoggin listed as the three most important issues which should come before the 1951 session as: First, Financing the Minimum Foundation Program for Education; Second, Modification, if not entire revision, of our tax system, and Third, Financing the Juvenile Court bill which was passed last session.

"Just how these items should be handled is not definite in my mind," the solon says. "However, I intend to study them thoroughly before the next session and I will go on record after my investigation and study."

Scoggin said he firmly believed a revision and modification of certain taxes should be made before a sales tax was put upon the people.

"I do not mean that I am for a sales tax," he adds quickly, "but I believe that the move for a sales tax has gained such momentum that we will have some form of sales tax before the next two years' term elapses."

The youthful legislator was born in Floyd County, graduated from Berry Schools College, spent two and one-half years aboard a "baby flat top" in the Navy, and then studied law and began the practice of law in 1947 with Graham, Wright in Rome. He is a Baptist, member of the Legion, VFW, Callier Springs Golf Club, Civitan Club and Chamber of Commerce. He and Mrs. Scoggin, the former Marie Terrell, of Floyd County, have a daughter, Bobbie Marie.

Scoggin introduced the late Gov. Eugene Talmadge in Floyd County in 1946 and introduced

Soap Boxer Jerry, Ill, To Pull for Brother

By BILL BORING

A sandy-haired, blue-eyed boy of 13 who had worked himself up from the pits to the time when he could take the wheel in a Soap Box Derby, Tuesday was lying flat on his back at Grady Hospital—cut down by an attack of appendicitis.

But Jerry Adams, the boy in question, was taking the tough break like the true little competitor he is—"Oh, well," he says, "there'll be another next year."

"And you'll win it!" his mother, Mrs. S. E. Morgan, put in, giving her hero a hug. "Boy, how you'll win it!"

Mrs. Morgan, like most mothers of Soap Boxers, knows as much about the racing game as her son; or in Mrs. Morgan's case, her two sons. In addition to Jerry, she has another son, Cecil, age 11, who for months has been eyeing Saturday's big Derby, sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution, The Atlanta Journal and Chevrolet dealers of the Metropolitan Atlanta area.

Cecil is all-set. His racer already has been inspected and approved and when he hits the pavement Saturday, he'll be out to win not only for himself but also for Jerry.

"Cecil's got a fast car," Jerry says. "Faster than mine, I believe, and me's promised to split his earnings with me."

Jerry said he was in the pits as a mechanic in the Chattanooga Soap Box Derby last year. He figured he had learned enough about the game to try his hand at it this year. Then, as he finished putting a coat of black paint on his speedster and was about to print the UN name on it, a pain seized him, announced Tuesday.

Boys who will race for the Soap Box Derby championship Saturday are invited to be the guests of Bill France Enterprises, Inc., at the stock car races at the Peach Bowl Speedway at 8 o'clock tonight. Johnny Bruner, manager and starter, announced. A special section will be reserved for the boys to watch five racing events.

That was last Thursday and he was rushed to Grady for an emergency appendectomy.

"You know what I was gonna name her?" Jerry said. "Jonah." In case Jerry is still confined to the hospital when Saturday's finals get underway at 2 p. m., The Constitution and The Journal have arranged for a television set to be installed at his bedside. WSB-TV will telecast the finals from 2 to 4 p. m. from the scene of the races on the new Expressway at 10th Street.

"So I can see Cece come through," Jerry says.

PURPLE PAST EXHUMED

McGill Fails To Gag Gag Man Tom Sims

Tom Sims, the Alabama farmer-fisherman who has authored "Popeye," the comic strip, for 13 years, used to be a radio gag man—but his real growth in the gag field was stunted back in the 1920's on a collaboration with Constitution Editor Ralph McGill.

On so Sims confided Tuesday on his annual visit to Atlanta.

"Maybe Ralph doesn't speak of it—at least not in the columns of the newspapers—but it still seems to me to have been one of his better ideas," Sims said reflectively. "At least it got us another fellow kicked out of Vanderbilt for a whole term."

The gag: Duplicating invitations to a rival fraternity's dance and issuing them to the tune of 5,000 to the entire junior and senior classes and to a select list of two or three thousand police characters.

"Not my idea," disclaimed Idea Man Sims modestly, puffing on his pipe. "I just happened to know a police reporter and a printer. The real credit goes to Ralph and another Sigma Chi."

Credit seems to have soured into blame when several thousand assorted strangers turned up at a dance to which 150 persons had been invited. But Sims, although momentarily embarrassed by an interview with the chancellor, seems to have risen above this early and disastrous gag. He deserted newspaper work after a time to write for Amos and Andy on the radio for eight years and since 1937 has been directing the destiny of Popeye, Olive Oyl and Swee'pea, mostly from his 57-acre farm at Ohatchee, Ala.

A native of Cave Spring, Ga., Sims went to Ohatchee ten years ago to buy a piece of land for his father who was a captain on a Coosa River boat. He meant to stay a few days but he has been there ever since, except for periodic business trips to New York.

His working schedule includes "eight days of worrying about Popeye and about two days of writing." He keeps five weeks ahead on the story which is relayed to Artist Bill Zaboly in Westport, Conn., to be drawn. When he catches up he farms and fishes.

In course of 13 years Sims and Zaboly have added several new characters to the Popeye strip, which is published in more than 500 newspapers. Unlike Popeye, Sims prefers turnip greens to spinach, but he is accustomed to getting—and eating—spinach practically everywhere he visits.

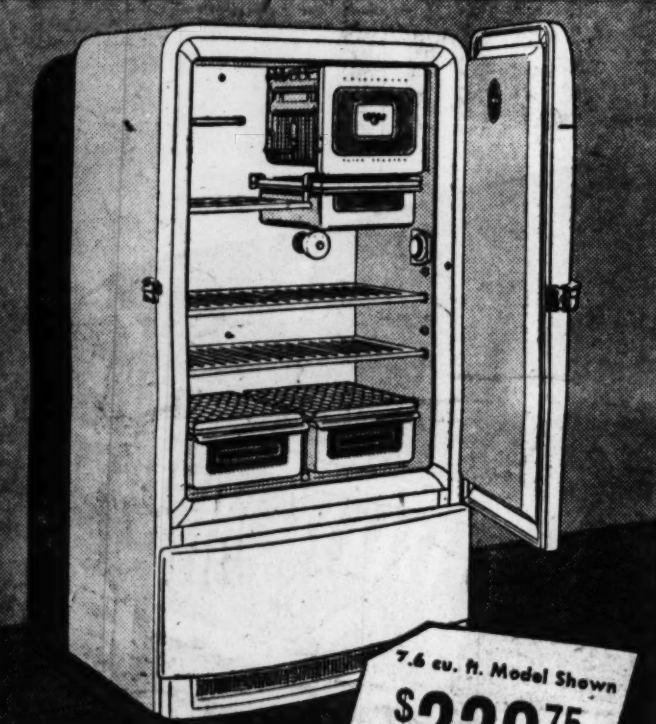

"If they know I'm coming," they cook spinach," Sims says. The writer, long-time Saturday Evening Post and Life contributor, is married to a good-looking girl named Agnes, who can fry a mean turtle. They have two daughters, Jenny, 8, and Becky, 18 months.

Reservists Seeking Active Duty Flood Naval Air Station Here

An all-day, continuous lineup of Navy Reservists seeking to volunteer for an extended period of active duty was reported Tuesday by Atlanta's Naval Air Station. Spokesmen at the Station said an "unusually" large number of applications were submitted by enlisted, officer and aviation reservists, heeding a call to serve "afloat or overseas" issued in Washington Saturday.

The Navy seeks applications from male Naval Reserve officers and enlisted men to serve for "six months or longer."

Any general line officer—aviation or non-aviation—may procure assistance in preparing an application at the Station in Chamblee. For information call CH. 5381, extension 270.

Regents Face Power Split At U. of Ga.

By M. L. ST. JOHN

The battle over division of authority at the University of Georgia and the College of Agriculture at Athens, which occupied much time at the June meeting, may be resumed at Wednesday's session of the Board of Regents.

Last month, the Board finally voted to create the post of Vice-President of the University of Georgia in charge of agriculture—and make the Vice-President answerable directly to the Board of Regents instead of to the President.

Some of the Regents who opposed this may ask the Board to reconsider its action.

The Board is slated to discuss the problem again—either to reconsider its action or to elect a person to fill the newly created post. Dr. Harry L. Brown, former Vice-Chancellor in charge of agriculture who was named Dean of the College of Agriculture, is to become the new Vice-President if the Board doesn't reconsider its action.

Regents Cason Callaway and H. L. Wingate sponsored the move to place a Vice-President in charge of the College of Agriculture and the research and extension programs, answerable directly to the Board. Chairman Hughes Spalding and Regent Sandy Beaver spoke against this, as did Chancellor Harmon Caldwell.

The Board Wednesday will hear Director John Sims' report on progress of the University System Building Authority.

The Authority is advertising for bids now on the first $6,000,000 worth of buildings to be constructed with bonds. The bid on the first project will be opened Aug. 1. The Authority will have 60 days in which to accept or reject the bid. Then the contractor will have 10 days to begin construction. Thus, the first building is scheduled to get underway in October.

The schedule follows:

Architecture building for Georgia Tech, bid advertised June 28, to be opened Aug. 1; dormitory for North Georgia College at Dahlonega, advertised June 29, to be opened Aug. 2; library for University of Georgia, advertised June 18, to be opened Aug. 3; dormitory at West Georgia College, advertised July 10, to be opened Aug. 8; dormitory at South Georgia College, advertised July 11, to be opened Aug. 9; annex

Housing Vote Is Promised At Marietta

MARIETTA — The Marietta Housing Authority announced today it had dismissed its appeal to Cobb Superior Court on the decision of the Marietta Planning Commission to prevent construction of a $1,000,000 low-rent Negro housing project.

A Housing Authority spokesman said the group had simply followed the suggestion of Judge Howell Brooke in dismissing the appeal.

Brooke told the group Saturday they could not pursue two different methods of obtaining a release from a temporary injunction preventing them from holding a public referendum this Friday on the housing question.

Dropping of the suit will invalidate that part of the injunction against the Mayor and City Council and opens the way for them to re-zone the Mulberry-Cole Street area.

Mayor Sam Welch, continuing his plans for a privately-conducted referendum, said he did not know what legal effect the Housing Authority's action will have, but there definitely will be a public vote Friday.

VA Increases Home Loan Total to $15

WASHINGTON, July 11—(UP)—The Veterans' Administration Tuesday announced liberalized home loan regulations under the GI Bill of Rights for more than 13,000,000 World War II veterans.

The new rules, effective at once, apply to veterans who have not already taken out home loans under the old provisions. The revisions permit ex-GIs to borrow up to 60 per cent of the cost of a home to a maximum of $7,500 (up from 50 per cent and $4,000); set up mandatory minimum construction requirements for homes started after June 19, 1950; allow unmarried widows of veterans who died from service-connected causes to apply for loans; and provide for restoration of loan rights to veterans who lose homes through fires or other natural hazards.

Eisenhower and Marshall Air Korea With Truman

By ROBERT G. NIXON

WASHINGTON, July 11—(INS)—President Truman has brought into consultation on the Korean war Gen. Eisenhower and Marshall, top five-star commanders of American forces in World War II.

The President has turned to Marshall, the man who sparked the Army's global victory from Washington, and to Eisenhower, who led Allied forces to victory in Europe, for assistance in the present world crisis.

International News Service is able to disclose exclusively that the President has been in conference with Eisenhower and Marshall, Army chief of staff and crack strategist in the last war.

The President held a secret conference with these two retired military leaders at Blair House.

Marshall is now President of the Red Cross, after previously serving as Mr. Truman's Secretary of State when the President formulated his stern policy of halting the spread of Communism over Europe.

Marshall was Secretary of State when he authorized the "Marshall Plan" and the President stood before a joint session of Congress and declared that the United States must send military assistance to Greece and Turkey to keep those two Communist-beset countries from falling.

Eisenhower is now President of Columbia University and is being mentioned as a candidate for President in 1952.

Both generals, although retired, still hold their status as five-star generals, and can be called back to active duty by the President at any time.

The White House would not say Tuesday whether the President planned to do this. It was learned, however, that Mr. Truman intends to consult with these two military leaders frequently in the developing Korean situation. He will seek especially their advice on the global implications of the Communist aggression in Korea.

Preston Terms Korea Battle A Showdown

STATESBORO, July 11—(AP)—"This is not a skirmish, it is not a temporary battle, this is war," declared Representative Preston Jr., here Tuesday in speaking of the Korean situation as he accepted renomination as a candidate to succeed himself in Congress.

Preston was renominated in the Democratic Primary without opposition and the First Congressional District Committee met here to formally nominate him.

Preston declared the government was making plans to make the Korean incident the showdown between "Communism and the democracies of the world."

The congressman called for the loyalty and support of the American people. He asserted the 82nd Congress will be one of the most historic, "because within the next two years it must reach a decision between Communism and democracy."

2 Newsmen House Group Are Killed Approves Arms Aid

Body Indorses Pacific Pact

By C. P. TRUSSELL

ADVANCE U. S. HEADQUARTERS, Korea, July 11—(INS)—A front line officer reported to U. S. field headquarters in Korea Tuesday night that two American war correspondents were killed in Monday's fighting—the first newsmen to lose their lives in the Korean conflict.

They were presumed to be International News Service Correspondent Ray Richards and Cpl. Ernie Peeler, of the Army newspaper Pacific Stars and Stripes.

A dispatch to headquarters from a regimental adjutant, Capt. Downey, told of two correspondents being killed but did not identify them. His dispatch was believed to confirm earlier reports the Army received that Richards and Peeler were victims of a Communist assault that overran an American front-line outpost they were visiting to obtain eyewitness descriptions of the fighting.

Capt. Downey reported that American troops were not able to recover the bodies of the two correspondents because "things are still awfully hot up there."

Richards, 56, was last heard from Sunday night after going to the front to view wreckage of enemy tanks smashed in an American air raid along the Chonan-Taejon road.

His last dispatch, filed Sunday just before he returned to the front, gave eyewitness descriptions of the famed American "lost battalion" which fought its way through encircling Chinese forces north of Chonan to rejoin its regiment.

Czechs Rap U. S. Korean Blockade

Prague Radio said the Foreign Ministry made the charge in a note handed the U. S. Embassy here.

House Group Approves Arms Aid

Body Indorses Pacific Pact

By C. P. TRUSSELL

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, July 11—A second year of military assistance to nations resisting Communism was approved by a 22 to 0 vote of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs Tuesday.

At the same time the Committee indorsed unanimously negotiations for a mutual defense pact throughout the Pacific area, terminated after the North Atlantic treaty upon which the arms-aid program was built.

These actions, however, were accompanied by complaint that the $1,222,500,000 authorized was utterly inadequate. Eastland, Democrat, Mississippi, told the Senate that the United States itself was "woefully" weak and unprepared, as had been demonstrated in Korea.

Sen. Eastland called for a doubling of appropriations and pace in building up defenses in Western Europe. That area, he contended, was the real objective of Communist desire for conquest. The United States, he held, could not live if Russia conquered Europe.

In a setting darkened by continued American reverses in Korea, the House Committee approved the measure passed by a 66-0 vote of the Senate on June 30 without changing a word.

There was a possibility that the bill would be held before the House for action before the end of this week. The Committee will start preparing a voluminous report Tuesday. The report will support the Committee on record as favoring the negotiation of a Pacific pact, consistent with the United Nations charter, for the common defense of the Far Eastern area, and the participation therein of the United States.

Strachey Held Unfit in Post By Churchill

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution

LONDON, July 11—Winston Churchill declared in the House of Commons Tuesday that John Strachey was "unfit" to hold the post of Secretary of State for War in the British Government.

Strachey has been attacked in the press as a former Communist supporter and has disavowed his earlier sympathies.

His background was not alluded to in the debate which centered on a speech the War Secretary delivered a week ago last Saturday. In it he used the word "plot" in such a way that it was believed to refer to the Schuman plan for pooling the coal and steel resources of France and Germany.

Tuesday Strachey repeated his earlier explanation that the offensive word applied to tactics of the conservative opposition—an explanation that was rejected as implausible by Sir David Maxwell Fyfe and Churchill although Foreign Minister Clement R. Attlee declared that he was willing to take his minister's word for it.

Strachey conceded, however, that on reconsideration he regretted "some of the expressions" he had used and that he was probably wrong to speculate on reasons that animated the originators of the French proposals.

Closing the debate, which ended

UN Flag Lacks Real Meaning, Atlanta War Veterans Confess

By ED KELLY

Veterans of World War II are mostly opposed to the idea of fighting in Korea under the flag of the United Nations (the Stars and Stripes) beside the UN emblem) and disagree with Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker's statement that "the will to fight among the democracies would not be 50 percent of what it was in World War II" if World War III should start.

This was indicated in a miniature poll of Atlanta ex-servicemen Tuesday.

How does the average veteran feel about these two questions? "I don't think the flag of the UN should be used unless nations other than the United States are involved in the actual fighting," said Robert G. Williams, a student at Emory University.

A veteran of three and one-half years of duty with the Coast Guard and a participant in the invasion of the Philippines, Williams said:

H. McManus R. G. Williams

"I don't agree with Rickenbacker. As long as we have the cause to fight for, we will surely have the will to fight."

Herbert McManus, of 847 Ponce de Leon, who saw two years of service with the Navy, said: "I prefer the Stars and Stripes; but if worse came to worse, I'd fight under either or both." Referring to Rickenbacker's statement, McManus said: "I believe the willingness to fight would be about the same as last time."

D. Harrison J. L. Hasty

A Paratrooper for nine years and a veteran of South Pacific campaigns, ex-Sergeant James L. Hasty, of 31 Rawson st., S. W., said:

"I prefer our flag since I think more of the Stars and Stripes than I do of the United Nations, and we're not engaged in actual war, anyway. We're just doing police work." Hasty said he knows Rickenbacker "personally," but can't agree with his statement.

"I don't believe there's going to be a war," Hasty said, "but if there is, the American people will fight to get it over as soon as possible. I'm on my way to the recruiting office now."

J. R. Jones M. R. Powell

Air Corps Veteran Milton R. Powell, of Rt. 2, Lithonia, said: "I don't think Americans should be fighting under the UN flag. They should be fighting under the Stars and Stripes. I don't agree with Rickenbacker either; I think the will to fight would be just as great as any time before."

"I think it's a mighty good idea to fight under both flags," said Navy Veteran Joe R. Jones, of 254 Third Ave., Decatur. "I don't agree with Rickenbacker because I think the democracies would fight just as hard again as they did last time."

Experts on Korea To Talk at Emory

A Korean student and three experts on Far Eastern affairs will discuss the background of the present Korean situation Wednesday night at Emory University.

The program will feature the Rev. Charles Song, Korean student at Emory; Col. Thomas L. Hill, former military government officer in Korea; Prof. Dozier Cade, one-time assistant city editor of The Atlanta Journal, who served with the OSS in China during World War II, and Prof. Arva C. Floyd, theology school faculty member who is the author of an authoritative study on social problems of the Orient entitled, "White Man, Yellow Man."

The program will begin at 7:30 p. m. in the Church School Assembly room, according to Henry Malone, President of Emory's International Relations Club. The panel is open to the public.

Labor Asks Symington For Spot in Planning

Unions Pledge Co-operation For Part in Crisis Policy

By LOUIS STARK

Special to The New York Times and The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, July 11—Organized labor Tuesday pledged the Nation its full co-operation in any emergency but asked for representation in the policy, planning and operational divisions that may be created to deal with the crisis.

Twenty-two top labor spokesmen sat down at lunch with Chairman W. Stuart Symington, of the National Security Resources Board, and in a frank two-hour discussion told him what they felt should be done to mobilize the nation's resources.

At the end they agreed to name a nine-member interim committee of organization chiefs. This committee may be designated within 24 hours. It will confer soon afterward with Symington on steps and procedures for mobilizing manpower, production and conversion of the nation's peacetime factories to a war-time basis if required.

Those who took part in the meeting disclaimed the idea that it was an emergency affair. They said it had been planned before the Korean invasion.

Despite these assertions, however, the gravity of the situation was emphasized by a few quiet but potentially explosive sentences dropped into the discussion by Symington. He indicated the need for complete plans for any emergency. While he did not draw any blueprints for the future he noted that the Soviet Union would probably let loose as soon as its atomic stockpiles are ready and we must be prepared for this eventuality.

Boiling the whole meeting down to a phrase, Symington told reporters that its purpose was to take up the problem of mobilizing all sectors of the American economy to pull together in order to attain maximum security.

From others at the meeting it was gathered that the no-strike pledge of World War I and World War II was mentioned by several labor spokesmen. This was merely to illustrate what could be done if labor were accorded representation on all levels of the agencies that may mushroom throughout the nation in the coming months.

Symington warmly commended labor on its no-strike policy in the last conflict and said labor had a right to be proud of its record. William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, gave out the joint statement agreed to by spokesmen for his organization and for the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the United Mine Workers, and International Association of Machinists, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and the Railway Labor Executives Association. Some of the latter's 19 unions are independent and some are affiliated with the AFL.

The statement which Green gave to the press not only pledged labor its aid to the United Nations and to the United States Government but it significantly spelled out labor's general policy in this paragraph:

"We pointed out to Mr. Symington that any plan for present or future mobilization of American resources must provide full and adequate representation for organized labor in the policy, planning and operational divisions of the government agencies involved. It was also pointed out that the creation of mere advisory bodies in such agencies will not meet the nation's needs, and that in the past this type of advisory structure has proved ineffective."

mittee of members of the legislature and other agencies. And he urged enactment of a modern State traffic ordinance.

In an analysis of Georgia's Accident Records Bureau, he said only 35 percent of the probable total accidents were recorded. He recommended an addition of at least three persons to the Bureau's personnel.

To improve Georgia's traffic engineering, Hill urged a long-range highway planning survey. He said Georgia was one of 17 States with no such plan.

In the field of traffic law enforcement, Hill advised at least 46 and perhaps as many as 200 additional State Highway patrolmen. He said there was need for a 40-fold increase in enforcement action against traffic law violators who produce accidents.

Although he called Georgia's school safety program "good," Hill recommended provision of additional instructional materials for teachers and expansion of the school-bus safety program to include vehicle maintenance, standards for driver selection and school-bus driver training.

Georgia's driver licensing was called the "strongest" part of its safety program, but Hill advises more restrictions of their use to keep incompetent and accident-prone drivers off the highways.

W. E. Mitchell, President of the Georgia Safety Council, and Jerry Connor, Executive Director, endorsed Hill's recommendations.

Col. Eugene Burke, Assistant Director of the State Highway Patrol, said they should be coupled with "the right kind of public opinion."

He pointed out that judges, sheriffs and chiefs of police were directly or indirectly named by the people.

"We won't get stricter enforcement," he said, "until the people want it . . . They must be educated as to the need for greater traffic safety."

uation in considerable detail.

"This included an account of what has taken place from the beginning of the North Korean invasion down to date; what had been done to meet that offensive; what is contemplated for the immediate future, and plans to meet certain possible contingencies not now in the picture."

"Other sensitive areas, in addition to Korea, were discussed, and the possibility of action in any or all of these sensitive areas was surveyed."

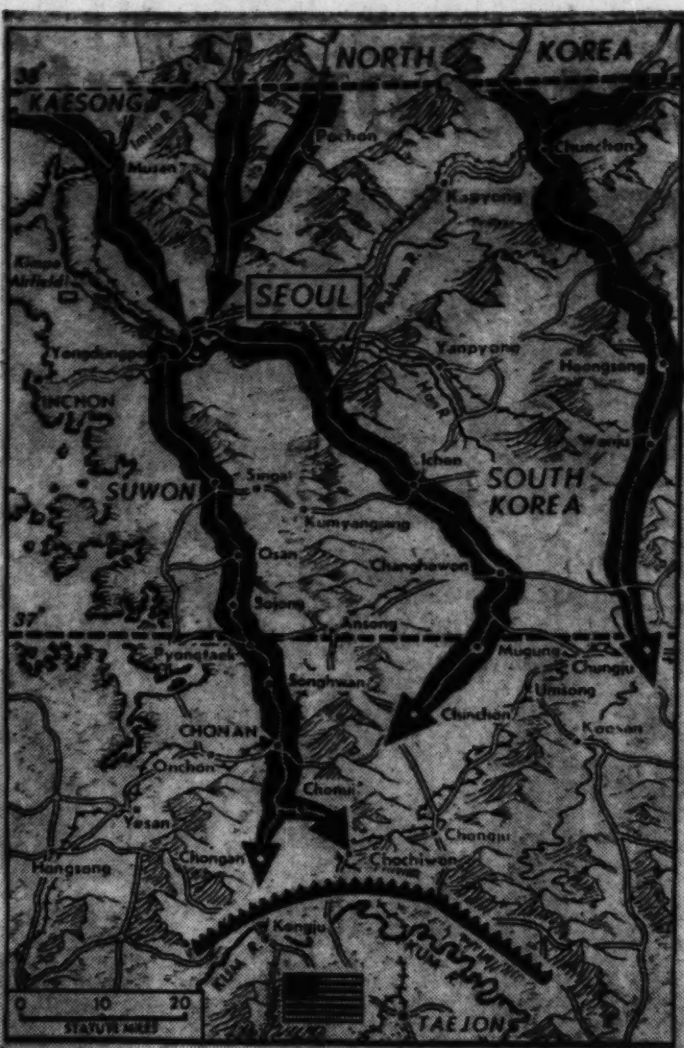

"The Committee feels that Gen. (Douglas) MacArthur in the Korea area is confronted with an extremely difficult campaign and that he is conducting it with his usual outstanding skill."

"We feel that Gen. Bradley and the three joint chiefs of staff (of Army, Navy and Air), under the general direction of the President and the Secretary of Defense, are giving Gen. MacArthur every possible assistance."

"Naturally logistical problems (meaning the problems of delivering to a forward battle line what is needed there) are extremely difficult due to distance, limited port capacities, and relatively poor landing field facilities for aviation."

"All this means that developments in the Korea area will take time, and that our forces, particularly our ground forces, cannot and will not be massed immediately."

"It would be a disservice to the American people to treat the unfolding events in Korea with optimism. We all should realize the difficulties that confront this nation and the free democratic world, not only in Korea but in some five or six other areas.

"It will probably be some weeks before we can ascertain with fair accuracy the extent of the problem confronting us. It would be wise for us to be forehanded and to be reasonably ready for emergencies by such sacrifices and preparations as are necessary, rather than to treat the situation lightly and as one confined only to Korea."

"We hope the latter estimate (a confining of the fighting to Korea) will prove correct; we do not know for sure as of today. "In short, our campaign in Korea, which is a United Nations campaign, is an extremely difficult one. We believe it to be in good hands and that prompt action is being taken to deal with it. "It is a serious campaign, a difficult campaign, and our people should recognize it as such."

Sen. Tydings ended his formal statement on that note and then, in answer to questions, he thus summarized:

"I don't think things are desperate, but they are very serious and it would be a disservice to our people not to say so."

What he had said, in substance, was that it would require a measurable time to marshal American forces in Korea for any defense in depth or any counter-attack; that Soviet intentions elsewhere, including Western Europe—might not be clear for weeks, and that there was great anxiety as to what these intentions were.

Senators left the meeting speaking privately of a Korean campaign lasting into months—and possibly even as long as a year—in an atmosphere of tension elsewhere in the world. So far as could be learned, there was no suggestion of a Korean Dunkerque, in the sense of a forced and long-term evacuation with an accompanying vast loss of material such as the British suffered in Flanders.

While Gen. Bradley was in this military-political conference—as grave as any of its kind since the end of World War II—John Foster Dulles, Republican special adviser to Secretary of State Dean Acheson—met with 23 Republican Senators.

International News Photographer Charles D. Rosecrans described another engagement in which Tankman J. R. Glaze, of Dallas, Texas, was forced to jump to safety from his blazing light tank. Then, with bazooka fire, Glaze knocked out two Russian-built North Korean tanks.

Gen. MacArthur's Tuesday midnight communique confirmed the setback before Taejeon.

But MacArthur said that a United States regimental combat team succeeded in halting a Communist column at another point, eight miles northwest of Chochiwon, where another stiff battle was fought.

The action took place on the south bank of the Miho River, a tributary of the Kum.

The communique also pointed to a new threat, 125 miles to the northeast of the Chonui fighting. The new menace was described as a Communist column which, MacArthur said, "is attacking South Korean forces" south of the Han River's upper reaches, apparently aiming for Tangyang.

The communique added: "The trend of the activity in this sector points to an eventual two-pronged drive on Taejeon."

Capture of Tangyang would give the Communists a pivot point for a blow aimed at Taejeon from the east while the forces near Chonui attack from the other direction.

RICE

Noor Almost Sure
To Be Horse of Year

NEW YORK, July 11—The horse of the year is almost certain to be an Irish thoroughbred known as Noor. Noor not only has kept on winning races, but is also setting new records. The California tracks are fast, but only a great horse could hold to such a consistent pace so long. It is to be hoped that Noor gets as far east as Chicago. It would be even better for his record to have him run on one of two Eastern tracks.

Still, it is a trifle easy to be picking all-season stars. A year ago Coalstown, the Calumet flier, had won 12 straight races. Yet his last two races with Capot had put him in a doubtful spot. The vote between Coalstown and Capot was close, but it shouldn't have been even doubtful except for these two contests.

The test for the best three-year-old is still to be completed. Mid-dieground, having won the Derby and the Belmont, has the call, although he has lost a flock of races. Hill Prince is still rated close, but the Virginia horse has also dropped a number of decisions. Both are first-class thoroughbreds, but neither so far has stepped out among the greats.

This has been a season of inconsistency as far as the three-year-old roundup is concerned. For example, Oil Capitol had a fine winter and early spring. Later, around Derby time, he fell away. Then he came back again at Arlington. Mr. Trouble is another who has moved up and down. It would be impossible, however, to rate a three-year-old on top who hasn't been able to win at least one of the three triple-crown events.

Mid-dieground and Hill Prince will continue their argument the rest of the season. There are still big stakes left that can make quite a difference in the final ranking.

20-Game Winners In spite of some of the most outlandish pitching ever seen, there may be more 20-game winners this year than we've had in some time.

The list includes Sain, Spahn, Jansen, Roe, Roberts and Simmons from the National League—with Houtteman, Lemon, Lopat, Raschi, Gray and Hutchinson from the American.

Oddly enough, with all the batting power and run-making records piled up by the Red Sox, they have only one possible 20-game man—Dobson. Kinder and Parnell, their two 1949 stars, have been working overtime to get an even break. With Williams, Drope and Stephens leading the league in extra-base hitting and runs driven in, the two crack pitchers from a year ago have been sad disappointments to Red Sox camp followers.

Not too much was expected this year from Kinder, who had known only one good season. But Parnell looked to be one of the best young pitchers of many years after his 1949 campaign. He will need a long string of victories now merely to draw in sight of the 20-game goal.

Newcombe Disappoints Another big disappointment in the won-and-lost column has been Newcombe. The big Brooklyn pitcher was rated with a 30-game chance last April. But he has been tied up with various arm ailments that have kept him back. He may break out at any time, but he will need a fast gallop to finish in the 20-game group.

The Dodger staff is one of the most peculiar in the league. Earl Shotton seems to have eight or 10 pitchers who are about the same, few of them dependable. Outside of Roe and Newcombe he has no other pitcher who is to be counted on, either as a starter or in relief work. It seems impossible that two pitchers who carry all the stuff in their arms that Branca and Barney have can't win games. The two might be or should be 20-game winners. As it is, they won't win 20 games together. Byrne of the Yankees is another pitcher who may wind up close to the 20-game mark if the left-hander can locate the vicinity of the plate.

Atlanta, Memphis Dominate All-Stars

Imposing Line-Up
To Meet Crackers

By JESSE OUTLAR

Third-place Memphis and league-leading Atlanta dominate the twelfth annual All-Star team which was announced Wednesday by Bob Phillips, Secretary of the Southern League Baseball Writers' Association.

The Chicks placed six players, one more than the Crackers; Birmingham and Nashville landed three each; Chattanooga and Little Rock earned one berth and Mobile and New Orleans were completely overlooked.

Of course, alternate players will fill in for Atlanta representatives who'll be busy playing host to the All-Stars on July 18. Catcher Ebbas St. Claire, of Atlanta; Pitcher Marv Rotblatt, of Memphis; and Bob Schultz, of Nashville, were the only players getting a ballot from all 17 papers participating in the poll.

Pitcher Art Fowler and infielders Ellis Clary, Gene Verble and Ed Mathews join St. Claire on the squad to give the Crackers strong recognition. Other than Rotblatt, Memphis placed Pitcher Leo Goicochea, infielders Nick Etten and Rocky Krsnich and outfielders Bill Wilson and Bill Higdon.

Surprisingly, Birmingham's second-place Barons have only Pitcher Carl Littlefield, recently recalled by the Boston Red Sox, Boo Ferriss and Third Baseman Fred Hatfield.

Catcher Carl Sawatski, Schultz and Outfielder Tom Neill form the Nashville delegation, with Catcher Andy Fleitas and Outfielder Pat Hagertry, the league's leading hitter, representing Chattanooga and Little Rock, respectively.

Replacements for the five Atlanta players are Catcher Red Mathis, of New Orleans; Second Baseman Spook Jacobs, Mobile; Shortstop Joe DeMaestri, Birmingham; Pitcher Leo Kieley, Birmingham; and Willy Miranda, Chattanooga, utility infielder, Mobile's Mario Fricano, with 12 votes, takes over the pitching berth vacated by Littlefield.

Mike Higgins, of Birmingham, will pilot this powerful aggregation as Rollie Hemsley, who led Nashville to the pennant last year, is no longer in the league.

Higgins' starting lineup probably will be Sawatski, catcher; Etten, first base; Jacobs, second base; DeMaestri, shortstop; Hatfield, third base; Hagertry, Wilson and Higdon, outfield.

So you can see that the Crackers are going to have their hands full when they tackle this crew. In the past eleven All-Star games, the host team has won six.

This will be the third time the game has been staged in Atlanta and Pres. Earl Mann is hoping to break the attendance record of

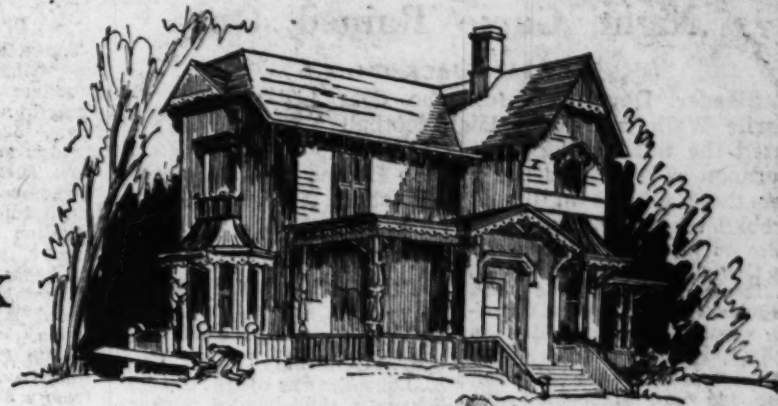

LaMotta Puts
Title on Line

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—Handsome young Tiberio Mitri, of Italy, Europe's best middleweight, will try to wrest the world championship from unpopular Jake LaMotta, of New York, in a "strike-breaker" 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

Most fans were hoping that unbeaten Mitri would win the title on his 24th birthday. Nevertheless, the "Bronx Bull"—who was 29 Monday—remained a 7-5 favorite to make a successful first defense of his 160-pound crown.

Although the "strike" of the New York Boxing Managers' Guild had prevented three other fight-shows from being held in the Garden since June 1, officials of the International Boxing Club were positive Tuesday that the LaMotta-Mitri bout and its supporting card of six preliminaries would be staged Wednesday night, as scheduled.

Wednesday night's scrap will neither be televised nor broadcast in the United States.

Redford Hurls DeKalb To Win

Post One Owls Triumph; Night Game Rained Out

By JACK JACKSON

Slender Dave Redford, who does his pitching for Charlie Waller's Decatur High football team in the Fall, blazed the third strike past 17 Lakewood batters Tuesday afternoon as he hurled the DeKalb Barons to a 5-1 victory over the Redbirds in the Fifth District American Legion baseball tournament at Glenn Field.

Also on the victorious end was Post One which outlasted Post 64, 9-6. The Post 140-Hapeville game, scheduled Tuesday night at Chamblee, was halted by rain after an inning and a half.

Rain forced a day's show-up. Post 140 and Hapeville will play at Glenn Field—the loser to be eliminated—in the only Wednesday game at 3 p. m.

Thursday, DeKalb meets Post One at 2 o'clock; Gate City battles the Post 140-Hapeville winner at 4, and Lakewood tangles with Post 65 at 8.

Redford, who plays short when not pitching, tossed only four hits—two each by Ray Jones, his mound foe, and Jim Baker. The lone run off him came in the first inning, the result of an error.

Sayward Rogers paced a 10-safety Baron attack on Jones with three singles which batted in as many runs. Tom Crawford added two hits to the DeKalb total.

Jones gave up only six hits and had a 1-1 ball game through seven innings. But Rogers singled and Louis McCullough walked in the eighth and Lamar West scored both with a liner to left. In the ninth, Doug Driver singled, Redford was hit and Larry Morris lived on an error to load the bases.

Rogers drilled a line to center, bringing home the final two runs. Despite the fact that Post 65 got only two hits, Willey Walker's excellent relief job led the way for the Post One victory. Harry McDevitt, Owl starter, did not give up a safety, but was charged with five runs in two and one-third innings. He walked five batters and added a run-scoring wild pitch.

Walker came on from first base to fan 12 men over the rest of the route. He allowed a double to Cotton Manning in the third and a single to Larry Bray in the seventh, but was otherwise untouchable. Like his predecessor, however, control offered the chief worry. He passed seven.

The Owls ranked starter Joe Reese and Manning for 12 hits, with Russ Wells getting three and driving four runs home. Don Grogan, John Wright and Jim Silvey had two each.

LEGION NOTES—Billy Driskell, Lakewood third baseman who was injured in Monday's game, is recovering rapidly and will probably see action later in the week. Perry Chappell, ill Gate City outfielder, also is improving, but won't be able to play for awhile yet.

Lakewood played Tuesday without regulars Hoyt McCravy and Earl Moore, in addition to Driskell. They were working. . . . Big Jim Flannigan, DeKalb's prize righthander, was in uniform and will be able to pitch when play resumes. He has been out with an attack of virus. . . . Here are the records thus far in the double elimination meet: DeKalb 2-0; Post One 1-0; Lakewood 1-1; Post 65 1-1; Gate City 0-1; Hapeville 0-1; Gate City 0-1. . . . The day's delay will allow extra rest for hurlers, and should make the final days of play that much better from the fans' viewpoint. . . . Lakewood, which last year used a strong plate attack to carry it to the Little World Series, has collected only seven hits in two games thus far.

Baseball's top celebrities attended the classic, headed by Commissioner A. B. "Happy" Chandler. But the game was played to honor one of the game's greatest figures, 77-year-old Connie Mack, founder of the Philadelphia Athletics. "Mr. Mack," who managed the first American League All-Star team to a 4-2 win over John McGraw's National League club in the first game in 1933 as Babe Ruth hit a winning home run, was honorary American League manager.

Junior Golf Set Today

Special to The Constitution
GENERAL OGLETHORPE GOLF CLUB, SAVANNAH, July 11—A field of approximately 100 of the State's top junior golfers will tee off here Wednesday morning in the 18-hole qualifying round for the 1950 State Junior Golf Championship.

The low 32 will be bracketed in the championship division and will engage in 72 holes of medal play winding up Saturday afternoon. The Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the tourney, will enter the seven low players in the National Jaycee junior tournament at Ames, Iowa, Aug. 13-19.

Among the favorites for the championship are Frank Stevenson, Savannah, State prep champion; Lester Kelly, Atlanta junior champ, and Fred Mitchell, Columbus Country Club.

Kelly won the USGA junior sectional qualifying medal at East Lake, Atlanta, Tuesday with a 34-39-73 and was to arrive here late Tuesday night. He was accompanied by Tony Baker, Gene Hay and Richard Waters, three other outstanding Atlanta juniors.

All flights below the championship will be contested on a match play basis.

The General Oglethorpe Hotel on Wilmington Island will be headquarters for the tournament. The Savannah Junior Chamber of Commerce will be host.

Collins Bows to Maddox

Ager, Willett Win Matches

By ERNIE HYND

Top-seeded Johnny Ager and top-challenger Frank Willett scored easy wins to move a step closer to a possible meeting in the finals, but seventh-seeded Carl Maddox and Nat Collins stole the show Tuesday as the City tennis tournament moved toward the fourth round.

Collins and Maddox were setting a second-round argument that began Monday afternoon with split sets, recessed over night and started again with the Tuesday session.

Slim Carl, former Tech star, finally won out, but had to come from a 3-2 deficit in the deciding set to turn the trick, 6-4. Maddox had earned a meeting with Sonny Mullis to be played Tuesday but Carl's joust with Collins again continued until nearly dark, forcing postponement of the Mullis-Maddox match until Wednesday.

All the other tourney favorites advanced without serious trouble, but only Willett and the No. 5 man, Russell Bobbitt, are scheduled for Wednesday matches. Willett will face Malcolm Manley in the singles feature at 6 p. m. and Bobbitt will be in the opener at 4 p. m. against Harrison Straley. The men's doubles pairing were drawn up Tuesday and the eight seeded players in the singles are all ranking in the twosomes with one exception, Don Floyd, No. 3 singles man, isn't listed in the doubles.

Defending champs are Ager and the little man, Bryan (Bitty) Grant. Neither they nor the No. 2 duo of Willett-McCall play in Wednesday's curtain-raiser, but third-seeded Maddox-Teagle and fourth-ranking B. and B. Shipley have matches at 5 p. m.

Defending Champion Natalie Cohen was again placed on the roof of the women's seedings and she'll open her title defense against Claire Clement at 4 p. m. Seeded behind her are Mrs. Johnny Ager, Ursula Adkins and Kathryn Williams.

Crawford Henry, a 13-year-old lad who'll enter Grady High next Fall, was placed atop the boys' division with young Sonny McCord named for the second slot.

The women's and junior doubles pairings will be drawn up Wednesday and competitors in all divisions will be in action Thursday.

TUESDAY'S RESULTS
Men's singles—John Ager beat Charlie Cox, 6-0, 6-3; Frank Willett beat Wilford Graef, 6-0, 6-3; Don Floyd beat George Falk, 6-0, 6-3; Larry Shipley beat Nat Smith, 6-0, 6-1; Carl Maddox beat Nat Collins, 6-0, 6-1; Carl Maddox beat Nat Collins, 6-0, 6-1; Howard McColl beat Glenn Dudley, 6-3, 6-3; Harrison Straley beat Gene Oberdorfer, 6-4, 6-4; Sonny Mullis beat Maddox called darkness.
Junior singles—Sonny McCord beat Ken Turner, 6-0, 6-2; Jimmy Pruitt beat Warren Berry, 6-3, 3-6, 9-7; Crawford Henry beat Charles Robertson, 6-0, 6-0; Homer Houchins beat Richard Johnston, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4; Bobby Spielberger beat Victor Friend, 6-1, 6-0.

Happy Burt Shotton Shouts Joyously, Forgets Earlier Boos

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

CHICAGO, July 11—(AP)—Burt Shotton, at the age of 65, was full of grins—happy as a 14-year-old schoolboy over the 4-3 triumph his National Leaguers fashioned Tuesday. The bitterness in his heart from a pre-game booing and jeering at his introduction was almost gone. He charged into the dressing room and cut loose with a blood-curdling yell.

"What a ball nine!" screamed Burt, clad in his usual civilian togs of grey slacks, white shirt, blue polka-dot tie and blue Dodger cap. "There's simply nothing to it with that kind of a gang," beamed the genial old boss of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Shotton spoke briefly of the booing that followed his introduction:

"I stood out there long enough with my hat in my hand to let them see me and get all the boos out of their system. Those 46,000 out there ought to be ashamed of themselves now."

Shotton said he knew Hank Sauer "wouldn't have a complaint. Sauer is a gentleman."

"All I wanted to do was win."

The Chicago fans booed Shotton because of the Sauer incident. Shotton had tried to displace the Chicago outfielder with his own Duke Snider but was overruled.

Ford Frick, President of the National League, shouldered his

Joe DiMaggio, Williams Injured in 'Star' Game

CHICAGO, July 11—(AP)—Both Joe DiMaggio, of the New York Yankees, and Ted Williams, of the Boston Red Sox, were slightly injured in Tuesday's All-Star baseball game. But trainers said neither injury is serious.

Williams jammed his left elbow when he thrust his gloved hand against the leftfield wall after making a great catch of Ralph Kiner's drive in the first inning. However, Trainer Packy Schwartz, of the Chicago White Sox, rubbed the stiffness out of the elbow. He said the Red Sox slugger will be able to resume playing Thursday against the Chicago White Sox at Boston.

Schwartz said DiMaggio aggravated a groin injury when the Yankee slugger ran out a double play grounder that ended the ball game. It was a recurrence of an injury he suffered Sunday against the Boston Red Sox.

DiMaggio said the injury might be serious enough to keep him out of the night game with Cleveland at New York Thursday, but that he probably will be ready to resume action Friday.

Rain Crips Cracker Chance To Face Fabulous Pettit

By FURMAN BISHER

Constitution Sports Editor

Just as if a Hollywood press agent had planned it that way, Atlanta came teasingly close to its formal introduction to the $100,000 arm Tuesday night.

As Paul Pettit, the bonus baby of the year, prepared to make his first delivery to Cracker leadoff man Gene Verble, a rainstorm that had been threatening came and stayed for the evening. Thus the official meeting must wait.

Pettit quit on top for the first time this year. The young fellow from California, in and out with an ailing arm, has lost twice and has yet to win his first professional victory.

The Pelicans had staked him to a 2-0 lead in their half of the first. Bob Kellogg led off with a single. Harry MacPherson got Hal Bevan on strikes, then Roy Buschchen lofted a home run into the forest of right field signs.

The Crackers crossed shootin' arms with Pettit in Spring training, the night Larry Lassalle shut out the Pels in New Orleans. But this was their first meeting on the schedule.

With the Summer rain that grew into a downpour by 9:15, the Crackers washed the Pelicans out of their hair and set out about midnight for Nashville with a 2½-game lead. There—and a whisper their unholy fact—they attempt to break a 12-game losing streak that extends back to August of the 1948 season.

That was the last occasion of a Cracker victory in Sulphur Dell, a premature ball park delivered after seven months. Weather has allowed only one Cracker showing there this year, and that was the night in which Hugh Casey walked in the winning run. Since that time the stout veteran has delivered gem after gem in relief.

This will be a short but busy visit. In three days with the Vols, the Crackers play five games, two Wednesday, a single Thursday and two more Friday. They return to rendezvous with Chattanooga at Ponce de Leon Saturday night and catch their third double-header in five days here Sunday.

Dick Hoover, whose scheduled start was delayed, will be joined by Don Liddle in a left-handed swipe at the Vols Wednesday night. From that point forward, the Cracker pitching picture is blotched.

"I don't feel as bad about it as I should, I guess," Manager Dixie Walker said. "But we've just got to do the best we can with what way into the steaming, hot dressing room, to offer a warm handshake of congratulation to Shotton.

Will Harridge, President of the American League, did the same thing.

"This is much better than going over and congratulating you," grinned Shotton.

In the crowded dressing room, Shotton squeezed his way through to congratulate his victorious players. He had his picture taken with Red Schoendienst, of the Cardinals, whose fourteenth inning homer broke up the game, and with Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner, who homered in the ninth.

The red-headed Schoendienst was joyously gleeful.

Somebody asked what sort of pitch Detroit's Ted Gray threw him in the fourteenth.

"I guess it was a double-knuckle ball," he said with a huge grin. "The pitch didn't have much to it, because I pulled it."

Shotton praised the pitching performance of his five National League hurlers, particularly the exceptional twirling of New York's Dropo, "that my hit barely caught Larry Jansen, who fanned six and allowed one hit in five innings."

to catch a train and was determined to do it.

"I only wish I could have sent in my pinch hitters sooner," he said. "But as things worked out I was pretty well hamstrung in trying to find a place to insert them. Take Boston's Vern Stephens, for instance. I was getting ready to use him when the game ended. I apologized to him for making him sit on the bench."

"There was good pitching on both sides," continued Stengel, while making for the showers. "We tossed two home-run balls and that did it. Only seven hits were real hard ones all day. I would say Dropo's blow in the first inning was probably the hardest hit I saw."

Walt Dropo, the 220-pound Boston first baseman, had nothing but praise for St. Louis' Enos Slaughter. Slaughter made one of the most sensational catches in all-star history. He snared Dropo's 415-foot smash over his shoulder in the second inning before the ball could drop over the low centerfield fence guarding the bullpen.

"Slaughter told me later," said Stengel, "that my hit barely caught Larry Jansen, who fanned six and allowed one hit in five innings."

What's Wrong in Korea?

Continuing United States reverses in the Korean fighting indicate that something has gone badly wrong, not merely in the task immediately at hand, but with the planning and concepts that underlie our entire defense strategy.

It is unkind, but not malicious, to remind the Defense Department that there are those high in its echelons who not many months ago were in the process of leading the American people to believe a major war could be won in a 30-day blitzkrieg from the air and that ground forces and naval strength were things of the past except for certain nominal purposes.

We also were assured by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff that American Army units overseas were capable of taking care of urgent needs at any point of contact.

The grave facts are that the military obviously has grossly underestimated the strength of the enemy and just as grossly overestimated our own ability to retaliate.

It is just as well that this point has been revealed at a time when it still is possible to take steps to rectify the errors without serious losses being incurred.

The President was assured at first that only air strength and naval bombing and protection were needed to give victory to the South Koreans. But even with addition of ground troops, the going has been tough and serious reverses have been incurred. The Air Force has been unable to attain maximum efficiency at bombing because of weather and terrain. But weather and terrain will be encountered at any point on earth and the fact that they have been deterring factors in the Korean conflict demonstrate that too much has been taken for granted in high places.

In all fairness, a campaign in such a locality as Korea never was contemplated by those who formulated our defense strategy. But we hold that good military planning, with emphasis on the proper fundamentals, will enable forces to give a good account of themselves regardless of special local conditions. A democratic country can never determine where or when a war shall be fought. The magnitude of the errors is not lessened.

In an analysis of our weaknesses in Korea, Hanson W. Baldwin, of The New York Times, includes underestimation of the role of armor (tanks) in modern war; overestimation of the effectiveness of air power; overconcentration on one kind of airpower at the expense of others and reduction of Marine ground units and an underestimation of the importance of an amphibious "lift," meaning sea transportation.

Obviously, there is need—urgent need—for re-evaluation of our entire defense strategy—and perhaps for personnel changes as well.

Even after our tanks got into operation in Korea they were outgunned and all but two knocked out by superior guns of the Communists' Russian-made tanks.

"What was first needed in Korea," continues Mr. Baldwin, "and what will be first needed in virtually any war in which we may engage, is tactical air power—fighters, fighter bombers and light bombers based on land and sea bases. The aircraft carrier, Marine aviation, which has specialized in the close support of ground troops and was severely cut this year in Mr. Johnson's program from 24 to 16 squadrons, and Air Force tactical planes were the first kinds of air power needed."

The B-36 is not effective in such fighting as goes on in Korea. Navy carrier planes, which are most effective, are badly needed, but because of the great cut-back in the Navy program carriers in sufficient number are not now available.

The First Marine Division is scheduled to enter the Korean conflict. Its departure was delayed by the lack of naval transportation. Because of the cutback of both Marine and Naval activities, the First Marine Division was reduced to a single infantry regiment. Presumably this will be augmented for Korea, but the division can hardly be expected to function as smoothly as is customary in the Marine Corps. The Marines were called at the specific request of Gen. MacArthur, who has no love for the Marine Corps, but recognizes they are experts at the type of fighting that is going on in Korea.

The basic facts are that in order to win, this country must have the same kind of balanced forces which won for us in World War II. The extent to which our military leaders have been wrong is indicated only mildly and in part by Gen. Bradley's testimony before the Armed Services Committee of the House of Representatives last year when he said: "I also believe that after the initial phases are over, there will be little need for any campaign similar to the Pacific 'island-hopping' that took place during the last war. . . I also predict that large-scale amphibious operations, such as those in Sicily and Normandy, will never occur again."

The war in which we now are engaged poses the need for fighting forces of the same type, with the same sort of training and using much the same tactics which won for us in the last war. And it is not by conspiracy of the "Fancy Dams" that this is so.

Obviously, there is need—urgent need—for re-evaluation of our entire defense strategy—and perhaps for personnel changes as well.

You Must Take The Medicine

Rejecting a careful property survey by an outside firm, commissioners of the city of Gainesville have used what The Gainesville News calls an obsolete evaluation and set the city tax rate at 23½ mills.

The scientific survey made by the Ehrenborg company evaluated property in the city at $21,000,000. The survey cost the city $21,500.

According to The News, a 14-mill tax rate under that evaluation would have raised the same revenue as the 23½-mill rate on the $12,500,000 figure chosen by the local tax assessors.

The News points out had the Ehrenborg report been accepted, taxes would have been equalized and that the 14-mill rate would sound much better to industries looking for a place to locate.

"You can be sure," says the Gainesville weekly, "that the only ones happy over the tax rate (23½ mills) are the individuals with large homes and lots of city property. Everyone else, and the city itself, will suffer."

The city council in Calhoun has turned thumbs down on a studied appraisal made by the Clemminshaw company and is holding out $1,850 on the contract price because, the council says, the evaluations made by the appraisal engineers are "unsatisfactory."

The Decatur tax board has deferred acceptance of evaluations made by an appraisal firm. In Fulton, the county commissioners have voted against the scientific survey recommended by the Local Government Commission.

Of course, local governing authorities have the right to act in declining to raise evaluations or to set up more equitable assessments.

Local governments are suffering from sick revenue systems, weakened by the influence of personalities and politics in the matter of assessments made locally.

But when the doctor comes along and prescribes a remedy, they don't seem to want to take the medicine.

In general, our antique system of maintaining the ad valorem tax as the main revenue source is wobbly and run down.

It's going to take strong tonic to put the system in shape to yield adequate revenues, with the tax load distributed fairly among property holders, large and small.

But prescribing is not enough. You have to brace yourself and follow the doctor's orders to get the desired effect.

Liberal Education

(Dahlonga Nugget)

Your editor once got a master's degree in American history and political science, but during the closing days of Georgia's first June primary, while we were trying to help a candidate, these sons of Jefferson and Jackson here in Lumpkin taught us more in four days than we learned in five years of college. We've a notion to burn our diploma.

Not Alarmed

(Eatonton Messenger)

Last week the report got out that a representative of the Ku Klux Klan was in the county to organize a unit here. We were not disturbed because we felt quite sure that if such a move were on, it would meet with nothing but utter failure.

There are good and bad people in Putnam county just as there are in all counties. It could be merely our pride, but we have always had a feeling that the people in our county are a bit better than those in some counties. We don't think there are enough people in Putnam that could be classified as Ku Klux Klan material to warrant trying to organize a unit here.

Of the many sins and shortcomings that are in evidence here, the fear of expressing opinions among the people is definitely not one of them. We have yet to find a person in Putnam who would seek a flour sack to cover his head before expressing his views on current affairs or to take action on them if necessary.

It would be our advice to anyone who is earning his livelihood by organizing Ku Klux Klan chapters to travel further on where ignorance and prejudice are more rampant. That's why we did not get alarmed when we heard that a Ku Klux organizer was in the county.

McGill Evaluation

(Byron Anglin in Stewart-Webster Journal)

We wouldn't especially care to have the political acumen that Ralph McGill credits Roy V. Harris with possessing, but we certainly wish we could do as good a job of evaluating it as McGill did in a recent column.

Busy Season

(Sparks Eagle)

Less than half of the registered voters of the County took the trouble to come to the polls and vote, but with an election held right in the midst of the very busiest part of the year, one could hardly blame them.

Locked Boxes

(Sparta Ishmaelite)

Locked ballot boxes were used for the first time in Georgia elections and this was undoubtedly better than the traditional old "hat box" of thin pasteboard, which was used in most rural counties.

Underwriting Another Gamble

A Senate subcommittee is investigating a loan which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made to a Reno, Nev., gambling casino.

While it may not be irregular, it's at least unusual, this business of a government agency giving the taxpayer a roll for his money.

The Reno loan in question was not to a gambling joint, per se, but to a hotel which, according to one estimate, derived 98 per cent of its profits therefrom.

What did it offer . . . every room with bath and slot machine?

A great many persons are critical of the RFC's apparent lack of discretion, even though gambling is a legal business in Nevada, but so far as I can determine, no one has yet questioned its financial judgment in making the loan.

After all, there are not many loans the value of whose collateral may be doubled merely by the substitution of loaded dice.

Come to think of it, I'm not so sure this RFC loan to a gambling institution is without precedent after all. Hasn't the government been lending money to farmers for quite some time now?

'GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Dick Russell

Takes Some Ribbing

WASHINGTON—Senator Richard B. Russell, floor leader of the Southern Democratic bloc in the Upper Chamber, is taking a lot of good-natured kidding from some of the commentators on the advice he recently gave the Republicans.

He was extolling the virtues of our two-party system and telling the Republicans how they could build up a greater following in the South, long a Democratic stronghold. Here is the way he put it in a radio interview the other night:

"If the Republican party were to go back to the philosophy of defending the rights of the states and protecting business, and nominate men on a national ticket in whom the South had confidence, I think the people of this nation would be utterly amazed by the strength that would be developed for the Republican ticket in the South."

Mellett Comment Lowell Mellett, the former White House aide and syndicated columnist, thinks the junior Georgia Senator "had his tongue in his cheek when he said this." He goes on to remind that the Republican Party "is a perfectly good states' rights party so far as the protection of business is concerned," adding that some of the party leaders are disposed to go even further than Senator Russell himself in that respect.

"What the Senator really has in mind, of course, is civil rights," Mr. Mellett declared. "He would have the GOP abandon Abraham Lincoln as its patron saint and take up somebody like Jefferson Davis. Which he knows right well the GOP won't do."

Describing Russell as "the shrewd Georgian," the writer suggests that he may have had something else up his sleeve in undertaking to tell Republicans how they could build up a strong opposition party in the South. "He may be seeking to warn his Republican friends in the Senate against listening to men of the Duff and Ives stripe and to remind them of the excellent working arrangement they now have with the Southern bloc."

In this, reference was being made to the ability of Southern Democrats to team up with conservative Republicans and defeat most any proposition that is laid before the Senate. It is a coalition that infrequently comes into play. The Southerners have usually had to rely on a certain amount of Republican support to beat down the various civil rights bills which they bitterly oppose.

"Either that," Mr. Mellett observes, "or Senator Russell is just kidding." He thinks the latter hypothesis is supported by something else the Georgian said in the same interview; namely, that the South has suffered and been neglected, losing its proportionate strength in the Government because of its devotion to the one-party system.

Committee Posts The writer reminded that the South, by virtue of the one-party system which enables it to send men to Congress for long periods of unbroken service, now holds the chairmanships of 8 of the 15 committees that manage the Senate's business, while 11 out of 19 House committee chairmanships are similarly held. "Partly due to this situation," Mr. Mellett said, "in the matter of federal appropriations it is hard to see where the South has suffered and been neglected."

But Senator Russell was probably thinking more of the Executive Department of Government rather than Congress. What he had in mind was the disposition of both Republican and Democratic administrations to pass over the South in filling the more important positions in the government. There is not at the present time, for example, a single Southern man in the cabinet.

The point Russell was probably making is that if there were a strong two-party system in the South no President could well afford to ignore such an important geographical area of the country in forming his cabinet.

Nevertheless, some of the commentators have been suspicious of the motives behind the Russell advice to the Republicans. As the leader of the Southern bloc which finds it necessary to play ball with the Republicans occasionally when controversial measures are advanced, the thought is that he may merely be buttering up the GOP as a means of keeping alive the coalition. He has long been recognized as one of the smoothest operators in the Senate, measured in his ability to get things done.

As to the extent of his sincerity about telling the Republicans how to build up a strong opposition party in the South, he no doubt would like to see that done—everywhere but in Georgia, with a further proviso, perhaps, that the GOP not become strong enough to upset the Democrats completely.

The Editors: Is Gladstone Williams really serious when he advocates using the atomic bomb in Korea or is he just spoofing? If the first, he is showing mighty little sense; if the second, very poor taste. You pay your money and take your choice. You can even do it for free.

The whole world is in suspense and terror lest some nation use the first one, but woe to the one that does.

Russia must have at least four. One each on Korea, Tokyo, Manila and Formosa would make things right tough.

It is to be hoped that such a suggestion be kept to ourselves and that Mr. Williams think to better effect.

Sensible Solution

The Editors: I have sent Gladstone Williams the following wire: "Your article in Tuesday's Constitution is the only sane, sane and sensible suggestion that has come out of Washington about the war situation. I think that you should be put in Mr. Acheson's place, and if your ideas carried out we would end this thing and the whole Russian matter within thirty days. Otherwise we are fixing to destroy a million of our American boys while Mr. Acheson primps and the others fiddle."

I see no need of giving these brutes any notice. Let the atomic bombs drop on Moscow and other important places in Russia by the hundreds and just a few on North Korea and that will be sufficient notice. Our boys already slaughtered over there are more valuable than every Communist over there.

Time Will Really Tell

The Editors: There is a question asked in the Bible that aptly fits Atlanta. The question deals with the thought if a man can not fairly and honestly rule his own household how can he be trusted to govern others.

Atlanta wants to be a dictator over all Georgia. Yet she can not solve her own problems and intends to ask the Legislature to help her ram her intentions of dictatorship down the throat of organized labor in Atlanta.

The trolley operators in Atlanta have families to support. You will not find their wives active in the Women's Clubs that act as Delilahs to down the City of Atlanta workers. Any sensible person knows that Mayor Hartsfield would not work for the pay rate that the trolley operators obtain.

Yet when they stick together for collective bargaining, they are called all kinds of hard names and the most impressive of all, their representative to the General Assembly is defeated because of their stand.

The lawyers that Atlanta retains to file suits attacking the County Unit System would not work at the hourly rate that labor receives. Neither will you find the wives of the laboring men in the ranks of the giddy Delilahs who do not have anything else to do but flit around

If His Country Calls?

The Editors: I wish your column in The Constitution under date of July 7th had made it a little plainer that Chief Justice James F. Byrnes is not stopping his ears to any future call his Nation may make for his services. He did not turn a deaf ear to the recent appeals of South Carolina citizens for him to offer for Governor, and if the international crisis worsens, Mr. Byrnes will not isolate himself from answering any call for help that his country might make.

After hearing Mr. Byrnes both publicly and in private conversation, I am convinced that his present position relative to the future is that of any other patriot, who is not planning to give all of their future to government service. But if his country needs and calls him, any patriot including Mr. Byrnes will change his present plans.

Please do not give the public the impression that Mr. Byrnes will not be available to his country after he becomes Governor of South Carolina.

Amplifying the 'Voice of America'

WASHINGTON—We are planning a greatly expanded "Voice of America" to tell our story to the world. This is much needed today, particularly because of the Korean crisis, to meet with truth, the stepped-up fabrications about us and our motives coming out of Moscow. They are getting more and more ridiculous, apparently based on the theory that the big lie, told often enough, will have its effect in some parts of the world. It is important that our story go to every corner of the globe. Not only for us, but because we have assumed the leadership of the free nations. Their association with us and our aims gives us a responsibility to them. Their cause is our cause, just as our cause is theirs.

But there is something else at stake in this present crisis. That is the United Nations. Nothing can help so much to uphold its hands and show its usefulness and, in the long run, to preserve it as the day-by-day story of the way it is accepting its responsibility and proceeding with vigor to rally 43 nations of the world in a common enterprise to stop aggression in Korea.

That story, since we are part of it, goes out over the "Voice of America" and expansion of our facilities and coverage is needed to intensify its effect. Likewise, the United Nations has its own radio voice which tells the daily story of UN activities.

There is one single and simple story revolving about a personality—and a most important personality—which, as it has developed and been told over a period of weeks, should be having its effect wherever the radio can penetrate, including behind the Iron Curtain.

This is the story of Trygve Lie, UN Secretary General. It is a very human and understandable story. For Trygve Lie, when he started a few weeks ago his single-handed crusade for peace, acting in his official capacity, represented the aspirations for peace of the people of the world—or certainly most of them—and their hope that somehow, in some way, it might be possible to bring the United States of America and Russia, and the other big powers about the table for direct negotiations to settle our differences and end the "cold war."

He was bold and direct. He visited top officials here, in England and France and flew to Moscow to talk with Josef Stalin. It was the common-sense, straightforward sort of approach that is understandable to ordinary folks, for it is the way they like to settle disagreements in their own lives with their neighbors, and therefore was refreshing and inspiring.

FRED OTHMAN

A Document Pickled in Helium

WASHINGTON—I bet Dr. E. U. Condon, the distinguished scientist who heads the Bureau of Standards, thinks twice before he volunteers the U. S. Senate any more information on how he's trying to preserve the Constitution. Listen: The gentlemen of the Appropriations Committee, led by the terrible tempered Senator from Tennessee, Kenneth McKellar, were lambasting the doctor about the way he kept his books. They claimed he got $10,000,000 a year from Congress to run his laboratory, and then took in another $9,000,000 for work farmed out by other Government departments.

The Senators said this made it impossible for them to keep up with the way the doc was spending money, and added that it probably was breaking the Constitution.

The genial Dr. Condon said it was not, either. He said he had taken an oath to uphold the Constitution. And then he smiled—and blurted out a statement about his work in preserving the Constitution. This, as it developed, was a mistake.

Dr. Condon hastened to explain that he was working on a hermetically sealed glass case, with helium within and temperature controls without, to keep this document safe for all times. This, he said, was on the basis of the deal he'd made with the Library of Congress to pay for the job. Ooops!

And there he was, trying to defend himself from charges that his attempt to save the Constitution literally was actually breaking it. He could not win. He said he did his dead-leaves to obey the Constitution.

Sen. McKellar said it looked to him like he kept it in a glass case.

"In a helium atmosphere, sir," replied Dr. Condon.

"Yes, in a helium atmosphere, where you are playing uncharted waters with the Constitution," said the gentleman from Tennessee.

So the statesmen talked some more about what

NEW YORK—Vivien Kellems, who was done out of the Republican nomination for the Senate by a highly suspicious convention in Hartford, Conn., made a great American political speech, one of the best I have ever read, at Los Angeles in October, 1949. It was called "The Golden Jackass." She said in part: "We're quite smug about our hoard of gold buried in the ground but did any of you read in the newspapers recently that we had shipped 10 tons of gold to Italy? Did we give Italy the gold or did Italy go through the motions of paying for it with money we had already shipped her? Wouldn't it be a good idea to send a few adding machines down to Fort Knox and do a little counting? How much gold is there in the ground down there?"

As a comment hereon I would say that I made a little detour to Fort Knox the winter the Ohio River backed up to the second story of a famous Southern hotel in Louisville. Cappy Wells, a hero of World War I, who had been the genius behind the splendid football ballyhoo at West Point for several years, was now stationed in Louisville in command of a sheet of paper entitled "A Skeleton Battalion on Foot."

His soldiers being theoretical, he had time on his hands and his seal to make propaganda for the Army made his graying shoe-brush pick up and twitch, each quill apart, as I came into his water-soaked post of command in some sort of Federal building.

First, however, I had a sad mission to succor ere we could abandon ourselves to shameless publicity for the United States Army. Robert Barry, a great journalist raised in the tradition of Marne Henry Watterson on the Louisville Courier-Journal, was now stationed in New York, and he had conjured me to relieve his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Barry, on Brook Street, who doubtless had been perched on the ridge of their home those many bitter days and nights.

So Cappy Wells and I went out and Mom and Pop Barry met us on the high front stoop and, to our offers of food, blankets, fuel and, in moderation, cash money, replied with straining patience:

"What in the world is that Bob up to, anyway? We are fine. Furnace okay. Plenty of canned goods and plenty of tick at the store. But every time we look out, here is a battleship or a cutter from the Coast Guard tied up in the front yard and a landing party coming ashore with condensed milk, cream of tomato soup—and toddy. Never been so pestered."

Ma Barry has been gone these several years but Pop, though a little ailing at 90, is still all right.

Robert, however, a spectacular good-time Charlie for a long career of lavish generosity, has been down in his bed with multiple sclerosis almost three years and, with one exception, all

It is the approach not followed often of late by diplomats and was found impossible apparently because of heightening tensions. So Trygve Lie took it upon himself as representative of the UN.

He was attacked in some quarters in this country for "appeasement" and accused even by some of playing the Soviet game. He took it, for he felt very deeply his responsibility as Secretary General to make the effort. The UN's future was involved, as well as the peace of the world.

There came the North Korean Communist attack, an act of open aggression. He recognized that as an attack on the UN. He moved again, just as boldly, when notified by our State Department, to set the UN machinery into motion as provided by its charter.

Now Russia has opened up on him in a vilifying diatribe through its literary magazine, using the old familiar abuse.

While it is not possible to say, it may be surmised that this absurd attack by the Russians is not likely to have the effect planned for the reason that many people of the world also know of his sincere effort to make peace which they followed because it was close to their own hearts.

Wherever the radio could reach, his simple and dramatic mission was known. His decision on the Korean aggression can be measured in the light of that.

This is an example of how the day-by-day story of the UN in this crisis can have its influence.

Much is at stake, and Congress can be expected to see that and expand our "Voice of America" so it can do its share better in telling that story, along with our own story.

they considered the doc's hocus-pocus bookkeeping, whereby he spent nearly twice as much money as he reported. And then they got back to the Constitution as pickled in helium.

Sen. Ferguson demanded to know exactly how much that had cost, and then he wanted to know under which law Dr. Condon felt he had the constitutional right to do the job. The doc went, up. He said he'd get up that information as quickly as he could.

Two days later the Senators still were questioning Dr. Condon and they still hadn't learned how much he'd spent on embalming the Constitution in helium.

Sen. Ferguson said that if he had to save money it might be wise for him to quit trying to preserve the Constitution chemically, and proceed to preserve it institutionally. And, by the way, he said, when was he going to get the figures on the cost of that helium bottle?

Dr. Condon finally got the details. To date he has spent $2,035 on the case which will hold the Constitution in an atmosphere of air-conditioned helium. The money came from the Library of Congress, but he cited chapter and verse of the law to prove that this was constitutional.

He did not succeed. My guess is that he's wishing now he never had told those Senators about his Constitution-preserving project.

the wonderful, loyal pals, of the sporting and back-slapping set have been too sensitive to bear the sight of an old high-roller in dark distress in St. Barnabas' Hospital in the Bronx. And too considerate to disturb his solitude.

We left Mom and Pop and motored down to Knox. Cappy Wells, now retired as a colonel after a noble career, wanted me to make medicine for the First Tank Division under command of Brig. Gen. Adna Chaffee.

We lunched with Gen. and Mrs. Chaffee and to every lead by Cappy Wells about the wonderful First Tank Division I countered with an inquiry about that gold in those limestone caves and warrens.

Gen. Chaffee took evasive action but finally came to a stand. This was the second of the month and they always took inventory on the first and it was quite a laborious tour which the general always had to make in person because he was personally responsible for the money.

"My pay is about $6,000 a year," he said, "so I am going to be terribly embarrassed if we ever learn that I am short eight or 10 billion."

As to the total current inventory, he was mute, referring me to Henry Morgenthau in Washington. So I went away not learning the answer to Miss Kellems' question, and I still don't know and neither do you.

We then had a look at the rickety scrap that comprised our First Division of tanks. Cappy Wells tried to pump it upon our drive back to Louisville, but I kept shaking him off. It was junk. It was a lot of old harvesters and hay-loaders and a disgrace to the United States.

A few months later, Gen. Hugh Drum brought it all up to Plattsburg and purposely put it through such a sorry exhibition that even laymen were shocked, and the Nazis and the Communists held their slats. As a reward for that, George Marshall was made Chief of Staff and Gen. Drum, a Republican, got ditched.

Poor Gen. Chaffee was sick even then and died too soon to see the American tanks and all such that were used in World War II.

Life on Island Can Be Cruel

CUMBERLAND ISLAND—Life is beautiful down here, but life is cruel. Or maybe we see the hard part more clearly down here than elsewhere. You look out over a 15-mile stretch of you catch sight of a school of porpoises doing their dives and you know that a school of mullet is providing dinner for the larger and swifter fish.

You look overhead to observe a cloudless sky and there is a fish hawk making it home with something heavy in its claws and you know another creature is being ruthlessly murdered for a stronger fellow's dinner.

The caretaker tells you to be careful when you go to the garden for new corn, beans, okra and squash, there's lots of rattlers there and you ask why, and he says because it's a "great place for rabbits." Snakes like rabbits, he tells you.

Life in its primitive state is mighty cruel.

A Duel At the moment we are engaged in a contest with a raccoon and a rattlesnake. The 'coon made off with an old hen and one of two of her biddies. Before we could gather up the rest of her biddies, "something got" another one. The 'coon returned the next night and caught another hen, but this time he came so close to the house that the hen's cries awakened everybody and the 'coon was driven off.

I asked the caretaker how the hen was getting on. "Pretty good. The 'coon pulled her tail feathers out and gnawed on her neck a bit, but she is getting on all right." Last night the 'coon came back and got a sprinkling of shotgun pellets for his pains. Even here there was further cruelty. He was not killed outright but limped away in the woods with blood dripping from his wounds, probably to be finished by the hideous screw worms.

This rattler I mention is leaving a track too close to the house for comfort. From his width in the dusty road (about 8 inches) the experts declare the snake must be about 5½ to 6½ feet long, and that he must weigh nearly 20 pounds. So everybody goes about these days with eyes glued on the ground.

Constant Alert Having that gent around is about the same as having a loaded gun aimed at you throughout the day—you never know when it will go off. We're hoping to come up on him in daylight soon and in a position to get at him with the proper instruments.

I was about to forget the old turtle we helped onto a sand bed the other day.

The poor thing was so heavy with eggs she couldn't make it to the sand dunes where she was headed. She weighed well over 100 pounds and we took her by the flippers, one of us on each side and dragged her slowly to her proposed nest and left her. I hope she raises a big family.

It is a cruel world all over the world, but it sticks right out like a sore thumb, down here in the wilderness.

Normalcy Is Not A Social Offense

I saw "Father of the Bride" again, to make sure I was right when I said it was the best picture of the year. I knew that some critics would say it was lousy. Members of this school do not have to identify themselves.

They are a little cult—unfortunately widely imitated—who think they can prove themselves intellectuals by denouncing everything that is normal and pleasant and enjoyed by ordinary folk.

They proclaim James Joyce as the "emancipator" of literature—along with Freud and, no doubt, Kraft-Ebing. Gertrude Stein is their high priestess and D. H. Lawrence their prophet. The barnyard doodlings of the insane Pablo Picasso are vastly superior to the paintings of Michelangelo.

New Yorker Formula I was not surprised when The New Yorker jeered at my favorite movie as stupid and "wheezy." I said at the time that The New Yorker will not hire a man as a movie critic unless he hates pictures. I made a slight error.

Pictures are no good in The New Yorker formula if they are made in America. If they are made abroad and are sufficiently morbid then they are art.

The difference between The New Yorker and The New Republic is that The New Yorker is published for the cynics who think they are sophisticated while The New Republic is published for the Bleeding Hearts who eringe in their Park Avenue penthouses or in their Greenwich Village basements with each lash of the capitalist's whip on the bare back of struggling mankind.

The New Yorker uses slick paper and makes a profit off those who think a hatrack can lure men to their doom if just the right kind of "passion" perfume is used, while The New Republic is printed on wrapping paper used by butchers and exists on subsidies from Bleeding Hearts whose fathers had no qualms about how they piled up the cash.

One Idea The two publications have one idea in common, however: To sneer at Americans who like clean things like "Father of the Bride" and are nauseated at such things as "The Rocking Horse Winner."

In The New Republic's attack on "Father of the Bride" it says: "A hidden vice or a trace of guilty independence from the advertising-agency dogma would have been refreshing."

The very idea of not having a hidden vice! Why wasn't father a hop-head, mother an alcoholic and the girl a nymphomaniac?

"What it means by a 'trace of guilty independence from advertising-agency dogma.'" I do not know. The main complaint of the critic is that the mother and father were faithful to each other. I never knew that was an advertising-agency dogma.

It was The New Republic which editorially defended homosexuality in the State Department on the ground that it was "nobody's business."

Since when has it become a social offense to be normal?

Battle of Columbus . . . Fought Week After War Ended!

One of the prize "boners" of Federal generalship in the Civil War was the Battle of Columbus.

About a week after the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, a Federal Army under Gen. Wilson appeared opposite Columbus and immediately attacked the city in full force. Gen. Howell Cobb made a desperate defense, but was overwhelmed by superior numbers. The Union soldiers destroyed 52 cannon, railway shops, navy yard, arsenal, armory, 15 locomotives, 200 railway cars, a vast quantity of cotton and a small warship.

The loss to the United States Government was very heavy, as all of this had become Federal property with the surrender of the Confederacy a week earlier!

A Word of Hope for Arthritics

Friends of Harold Martin and his mountain protegee, Jeannette Hulsey, have commissioned us—in Martin's absence—to make a report on the courageous Clermont girl's fight against arthritis. Jeannette, you will remember, offered herself as a guinea pig at Emory University hospital to test the efficacy of the new cortisone injections against arthritis. She came to Atlanta with the help of a doctor friend from Clermont and countless Martin readers who were interested in her and wanted to give her a hand in her undertaking.

As both a Martin and a Hulsey fan we are pleased to report that Jeannette is back in her mountains, feeling altogether chipper and hopeful. According to the latest report available in this vicinity—a letter from Jeannette to Poet Ollie Reeves—she enjoys considerable relief from arthritic pain, has noted a loosening up of her stiff muscles and has gained about 12 pounds.

There is a waiting period between cortisone injections and Jeannette expects to be back in Emory for further treatment August 11.

The scientific report on the new treatment is still out. But Jeannette's personal report may be enough to give many of the arthritics sufferers a little hope.

IF YOU ARE ONE of those people who resent tipping on principle or are terrified of tipping because you never know how much and to whom, give pause to Bowie Martin's experience before you consider abandoning the custom.

Mr. Martin, the Atlanta real estate man, was told, used to frequent New York theaters in the days when it was customary to tip the usher who showed you to your seat and gave you a program. Fifty cents was the average tip but a man with a beautiful and impressionable lady could usually be counted on to cut loose with a buck.

The Atlanta gave out the largess just like the New Yorkers for awhile but one evening, arriving at the theater to see a murder mystery, he summoned up his courage and prepared to take a stand against tipping. The usher led the way, ensconced him in his expensive sixth-row-center seat and presented him his program. Maybe it was something about the usher's face or maybe it was the mood of happy expectancy that had settled on him at the prospect of seeing the murder mystery. Whatever it was Mr. Martin suddenly regretted his stand against tipping and decided to give the young man what he felt to be reasonable monetary recompense for his service. He handed the usher a dime.

But here, friends, is the warning in the piece. The usher felt that he had been under-tipped and he had his revenge in a delicate and subtle fashion. He leaned over, tapped the mystery-eager playgoer on the shoulder lightly and whispered clearly:

"The butler is the killer!"

ONE OF OUR most reliable scouts who has just returned from watching the movie-makers make ready to leave the North Georgia hills, overheard this in the dining room of Deluxe Cottages at Cleveland:

Ohio tourist to bright-looking six-year-old youngster sitting at a table by herself, "Where's your mother, little girl, is she in the picture?"

Child's prompt and literal answer: "No'm I don't think so. She left to go to the bathroom."

'Partisans of Peace' Causes Concern

WASHINGTON—The war in Korea has increased U. S. State Department and United Nations worry over the Communist-directed mass petition campaign of the so-called "Partisans of Peace," which already is claiming 60,000,000 signatures and is moving into high gear all around the world.

Instituted at a gathering of Communists and fellow travelers in Stockholm last March, the petition calls for prohibition of atomic weapons, "strict international control" of the atomic bomb, and branding as a war criminal the first government that drops an atomic bomb.

A number of Americans, including O. John Rogge, former Assistant U. S. Attorney General, and Artist Rockwell Kent, participated in the Stockholm meeting, but Rogge got in bad with most of his fellow delegates by disputing the contention that the United States wants war. Subsequently Rogge visited Marshal Tito and turned up as a paid U. S. agent of the Yugoslav Government.

The "partisans of peace" campaign was conducted with particular vigor in Northern Korea, from which it claims 5,000,000 of the 60,000,000 signatures so far collected. Of the remainder, 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 are claimed as coming from non-Communist countries, 5,000,000 of them from France and Italy.

The goal in the United States is stated by the Communist Daily Worker to be 5,000,000 signatures. Solicitors have appeared in the past few weeks in New York and Philadelphia and along the West Coast, most of them working in the name of Communist-front organizations such as the "National Labor Peace Conference" and the "Peace Information Bureau." The campaign also has cropped up in many spots in South America and it is being pushed vigorously in Indonesia, the Philippines, Malaya and other hot spots in the Far East.

While the Communists are keeping their future plans secret, they are believed to be building in the United States toward a big splurge at the American Slav Congress in New York next September. The over-all grand denouement is expected at a second world congress of partisans of peace, scheduled to be held somewhere in Europe in the second half of October, possibly timed to synchronize with the world-wide observance of United Nations Day on October 24.

Significantly, Russia is among the last countries in which this alleged peace drive has been undertaken and every effort is being made to keep the names of both "Russia" and "Communism" out of sight. Obviously the campaign is attempting to exploit the universal popular dread of another world war, and especially a war of atomic weapons.

In talking of international control of the atomic bomb the "Partisans of Peace" refer only to the toothless Russian proposal—ignoring entirely the plan devised by Bernard M. Baruch and overwhelmingly favored in the U. N. for unlimited international inspection and control of atomic facilities of every type everywhere.

Agreement of all countries not to be the first to use the atomic bomb, of course, would give Russia's huge standing army a great advantage. Winston Churchill, among others, has said that the only thing that kept the Russian army from attempting to engulf all Europe in the years immediately after World War II was the known American possession of the atomic bomb.

As demonstrated just now in Korea, a Russian promise not to be the first to drop an atomic bomb easily could be got around by slipping Russian-made atomic bombs into the hands of a satellite—for use, say, by Romania or Bulgaria against Yugoslavia.

Propaganda designed to debunk the "Partisans of Peace" drive is being pumped out by all Western radio transmitters. The difficulty is that substantially half the world's peoples are out of reach of these Western transmitters, but easily accessible to Communist outgivings.

216 Days or $282

George Horton, 19-year-old Negro, of 411 Connally St., S. E., Tuesday was sentenced to serve 216 days at the City Prison Farm or pay fines totaling $282 in connection with stealing three parked autos on Martin St., near Logan.

Ptl. Jack Langley and R. P. McGee said Horton was driving north on Martin street at approximately 60 miles per hour when he lost control of the auto, side-swiped a truck and two parked autos.

Recorder Frank White assessed $78 or 30 days for drunk under the steering wheel; $53 or 30 for leaving the scene of an accident; $28 or 30 for driving without the owner's consent; $16 or 28 for failing to possess a driver's license; $53 or 30 for speeding 60 miles per hour; $28 or 30 for resisting arrest; $8 or 10 for overrunning a stop sign, and $18 or 30 for failure to obey officers' signal.

Bootlegging

Recorder A. W. Callaway Tuesday ordered a 30-year-old Atlanta held under $300 bond to Fulton County Criminal Court in connection with what detectives described as "blocking for a liquor car."

Dets. R. A. Boone and J. E. Sikes said three weeks ago they noticed an auto parked on West Hunter St., S. W., and recognized the two occupants as bootleggers. Boone entered the auto with the men while Sikes waited in a patrol car nearby.

A second car closely followed by a third pulled up behind the parked car, Boone related. He said Ralph Byrd, 30, of 681 Windsor St., S. W., driving one of the autos, attempted to go between the patrol car driven by Sikes and the machine which parked directly behind the one in which Boone waited.

As Byrd was taken into custody, detectives related, the driver of the second auto fled. They added a search of the vacated machine revealed it laden with 134 gallons of illegal liquor.

Salesman Robbed

Detectives Wednesday sought a tall Negro bandit who seized an Atlanta tobacco salesman, wrested $100 from his wallet and escaped. The salesman, C. R. Waller, of 2251 Stephens Dr., said he made a delivery to 611 Magnolia St.,

Kingsberry Will Become Negro School in Fall

By HERMAN HANCOCK

The Atlanta Board of Education Tuesday voted to stand pat on a decision to convert Kingsberry elementary school in northwest Atlanta for use of Negroes when the new school term opens next Sept. 7. It also laid the foundation for discussions with Fulton County Board of Education on the Local Government program under which Atlanta will take over 38 County schools within the next five years.

Action in the Kingsberry matter followed appearances of a delegation of approximately 25 white residents demanding that Kingsberry be retained for use of white students. The resolution reaffirming the board's stand "solicited" the co-operation of all persons in making it effective.

At one point, T. A. Davis, of 620 Whitaker St., N. W., urged the board to reconsider and said there are some persons who are not taking a peaceful attitude about the switch.

Mrs. G. R. Cullum, Chairman of the delegation, urged retention of the school. She submitted a petition signed by herself as chairman and R. J. Banister, as co-chairman, demanding that the board rescind its order to convert the school. The petition was written on the back of Salvation Army stationery.

School administration officials pointed out that less than 400 white students were transferred to Couch, Goldsmith and Haygood white schools from the old institution and that 1,500 Negro students have been assigned to Kingsberry for the new school term. They also said a plan is being worked out with the newly formed Atlanta Transit Company under which students living long distances from any school to which they have been transferred would get transportation. It also developed that the longest distance would be 1.1 miles and that it ranges down to .2 mile.

Although no definite action has been taken to expand the City limits under the Local Government Commission recommendations, Atlanta and Fulton County School Boards plan to begin discussion of procedures. Under the expansion program the city would take over 38 existing County schools within five years.

Miss Ira Jarrell, City School Superintendent, and Paul West, County Superintendent, will open the discussions Thursday and both boards may be called into a joint session sometime next week. D. F. McClatchey, Atlanta Board member, was author of the resolution asking that talks be started. He said some members of the Fulton Board had suggested the conferences.

In other actions, the Atlanta board voted to sell the old Williams Street school property to Alexander-Seewald Company for $50,000 effective next July 1 and with provisions that a nine-foot strip be dedicated to the City for street widening purposes; passed resolutions regretting the death June 21 of Millard S. Alexander, of the school radio station, WABE-FM.

D. M. Therrell, Chairman of the Board's Rules Committee, said a preliminary draft of new rules will be ready for consideration at the August meeting.

Lack of Women In U. S. Pulpits Surprises Frau

By YOLANDE GWIN

A vicar in the German Union Church, Frau Marie Trute, left Atlanta for Savannah Tuesday, her brief case filled with notes of the Atlanta Council of Church Women, which she hopes to introduce into German practice.

Of the American zone sector in Germany, Frau Trute is in this country under the auspices of the United States Cultural Exchange project of the State Department. During her stay here in Atlanta, she met with churchwomen, she attended their social and business meetings and she visited various church projects eager for first hand as well as eye witness accounts of the American church woman's role in this work.

"What has surprised me most of all in your country," said Frau Trute in halting English, which she says she hasn't spoken for 20 years, "is the lack of women ministers. Perhaps it is the lack of interest on the part of women, but maybe it is like my country where women are not wanted in the pulpits. In Eastern Germany, there are not enough men to fill the pulpits, so women are needed and fill these positions. But the picture is different in Western Germany... there a woman has a hard time trying to make herself heard from the pulpit anyway."

"We had many welfare organizations in Germany before Hitler's appearance. The church women are trying now to piece together these remnants and start the work again. Women in every community are active and get together twice a month for Bible study. There is a question and answer program, and through this there is an outlet for strength and faith to carry on despite hardships."

"We as churchwomen, carry our help to individual cases, especially when there is sickness and lack of income, rather than to organized groups. But our individual and private work is the study of the word of God. That is for every woman, not just those of us who preach. All of us feel a great responsibility toward other women and their families for we feel that the strength of Christianity is with the mother, for she is the tie which keeps the family together and who holds in her hands the destiny of the children."

Frau Trute said that she had made "books of notes" on the social education, the church in rural areas, interracial projects, the Ecumenical Register, the training of Church leaders, the programs planned for foreign students and the mission in the council and in the churches.

She will spend some time in Savannah before continuing her swing through the states gathering religious data for use in Germany. Actually a frauline, she carries the title of Frau due to her theological studies and practices.

LET'S SEE NOW

Maybe a Mirror Might Help

By DORIS LOCKERMAN
Constitution Associate Editor

They say there is a new transparent mirror made to use in nursery doors so parents can watch their children without themselves being seen.

Of course it is a sneaky trick, this one-way pry, smacking of the gestapo, but they needn't think it will work.

No chick ever needed as transparent a thing as a mirror to see through his parents.

The awkward guy who tried to tiptoe out of a bedroom when his first baby was doing off to sleep, learned a lesson for life. Junior awoke and raised the roof. His screams could be heard for miles around, terrifying his poor Pop into permanent submission.

The dad who thinks he can get away with pretending he enjoys his salad, smacking his lips over a leaf of uncolored lettuce, isn't pulling the wool over his offspring's eyes a calorie's worth. The boy knows the old man is just waiting to get downtown so he can sink his teeth into a sirlion and a slab of apple pie. These little intelligences are telepathed on a little Morse code that only the young can decipher.

As for such things as Halloween pranks, and shooting Roman candles under porches on the Fourth, the grown man isn't living that can fool his youngster on that score. Watch him rear back to muse about being an angel at 10, the young can see the old gleam of mischief welling up in his eyes, and he knows the story is in the class with catching tigers and lions in the front yard. A fable. Fairy story stuff intended to amuse but not instruct.

On the bigger verities of life, the same understanding prevails. No hypocritical posing of goodness counts unless it is there, real and tangible, every day. No pious pretense of sobriety or morality makes any impression unless it's the real McCoy.

Maybe the parents need the one-way mirror after all.

There ought to be something they could do to make them feel invulnerable.

Advice to Business Girls—

"First, I should like to urge you most earnestly to compete with yourself, not with the other fellow... not to try to do better than Mary Jones, but to try to make yourself so good that the thought of someone else's competition does not enter your mind. In which case, it probably won't enter your chief's mind, either. My second suggestion as a basic need is a sense of responsibility. And my third is a passion for work."—Julia Coburn to the graduates of the Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers.

Canadian Spas Lure Vacationing Atlantans

Come Friday the Howard Candler, Jr., and their family will be off on the first long trip they have ever taken together. They will head West, with the Canadian Rockies as their destination.

Mr. and Mrs. Candler, Ruth, Glenn, Howard and Sam Candler will leave Friday by plane for this long-anticipated jaunt.

They will go direct to Banff Springs and then to beautiful Lake Louise. From there they will travel 180 miles north to Maligne Lake. Maligne is one of the Northwest's favorite fishing spots and there Mr. Candler and his sons will fish to their hearts' content for speckled trout. While they are angling, Mrs. Candler and her daughters will spend the time exploring the nearby mountain trails by horseback.

Another Atlanta family leaving for Canada recently included Mr. and Mrs. Richard Denny and their daughter, Betsy. The Denny's are accustomed to spending part of each season at the summer home of Mrs. Denny's mother, Mrs. John Graham, of Rome, on Lake Ahmic near Magnetawan, Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Denny and their sister, Mrs. Hughes Spalding Jr., drove to Magnetawan, but Betsy and her close friend, Clara Willis, went by train with Mrs. Graham.

Miss Grace Holden, lovely young daughter of Judge and Mrs. Frank A. Holden, chose a pink and white motif for her marriage to John A. Hunnicutt, III, of Athens, which was beautifully solemnized Tuesday evening at the First Presbyterian Church. Her bridesmaids wore airy ballerina frocks of pink point d'esprit with matching slippers, and carried armfuls of pink roses and baby's breath.

The bride's white satin gown, which featured a petal neckline, was embroidered in seed pearls. Her illusion veil cascaded from a coronet of Brussels lace, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids, valley lilies and stephanotis.

The note of pink was again introduced at the reception at which the bride's parents entertained, following the ceremony, at the Druid Hills Golf Club. The bride's cake, iced in blush pink, was embossed in pink roses and baby's breath.

Dr. William V. Gardner officiated at 8:30 o'clock. Judge Holden gave his daughter in marriage, and Dr. John A. Hunnicutt Jr., of Athens, was best man for his son.

Miss Judy Cooledge was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids included the bride's cousin, Miss Mary Frances Johnston, of West Palm Beach, Fla., the groom's sisters, Mrs. Julia Cain and Miss Gloria Hunnicutt, of Athens; Miss Susan McCall, of Moultrie; Mrs. Dawson Owens, of Albany; and Mrs. John Zellars. The bride's younger sister, Miss Betty Holden, and the groom's niece, Devereau Cain, of Athens, were the junior bridesmaids.

Serving as groomsmen were Balfour Hunnicutt, George Helme, James Stephenson and Ross Crane, of Athens; Robert Carithers, of Winder, and Ralph Goss.

Seating the guests were Morgan Redwine, Sr., Morgan Redwine, Jr., and Dr. Harry Talmadge, all of Athens; Gibson Perry of Winder; George Wier and Curt Hall of Albany; Judge Frank Hooper, Col. William Brewster, William K. Meadow, Hugh Head and Robert Troutman, Sr., of Atlanta.

Mrs. John Mitchell and Mrs. Rucker Lewis kept the bride's book at the reception. Assisting in entertaining were Miss Mimi Kellum of Dublin, Miss Ann Thomason of Madison, Miss Mable Rogers of Covington, Mesdames Harry Dunwoody, J. W. Collins, Jr., Russell Grau, George O'Brien, Frank A. Hooper, Misses Eva Whetstone and Carolyn Cooledge.

Mr. Hunnicutt and his bride left for a honeymoon at Ponte Vedra and Palm Beach, Fla. They will reside on Millidge Avenue in Athens.

STRESS INEXPENSIVE INDIVIDUALITY

Fall, Winter Fashions Show Marked Attention to Details

By MAYNITA GERRY
Constitution Fashion Editor

NEW YORK, July 11—Wednesday we will dispense with formalities. The time has come to get down to details, which, because they are so many and varied, might get lost in the shuffle unless we get them in writing quickly.

This is the second day of the New York Dress Institute's Fall and Winter fashion showings. Out of the ones we've seen so far, which included Ben Reig, Hansen Bang, Tina Leser, Maurice Rentner, Monte-Sano and Pruzan, Anthony Blotta and Patullo, one thing is unmistakably apparent: there hasn't been so much attention to detail since the Government agencies went out of business after the war.

Although more stress is laid upon individual types of detailing than perhaps at any time within the past 10 years, it is not the belabored, hazardous and consequently expensive attempts to be "different," that have overshadowed many a mark-down rack in the past few seasons. Now that the silhouette has finally resolved into only two general classifications, the straight and slim and the straight and slightly full, the detailing of a collar or cuff, or a skirt swing or bodice emerges as a more or less natural formula. Suit skirts in both the Ben Reig and Rentner collections are straight with Rentner's little peg-top pleats that ease you into a curved, supple waistline, and Reig's curved band at the waistline. Whereas Rentner's shoulders are generally soft and rounded, Reig has switched back to the set-in sleeve that gives a more attenuated, tailored appearance to the suit. Jackets, generally, tend to be shorter with often more than a suggestion of a peplum, in front or all around. The waistline is clearly defined, but not strangled. If they look lower, as they do, this can be attributed to one of two causes: either a downward curve in the construction of the waistline itself or the use of contour belts. The contour belt, incidentally, is the only belt. It must be an inch wide all around, but you get a wide choice of fabrics or leathers, from polished calf to suede and iridescent kid, to matching fabrics, satins, and jeweled belts. But best of all, you'll probably go for the satin belt and pump accessory ensemble to wear with your sports clothes.

Then there is the matter of piping which we mustn't overlook. This can be anywhere from an inch to an eighth of an inch in width, of some contrasting fabric or ribbon or soutache braid, but you will be most surprised to find gold kid pipings on black cocktail suits.

If it so happens that you haven't been hearing much about the neckline, don't be unduly concerned. It hasn't disappeared altogether; it has just been the subject of a number of changes. Starting with collars and there will be collars, they are small and high, large or low or vice versa and in between. The horseshow collar, though not as prevalent as we had been led to expect, is still around, particularly on suits used with various types of fill-ins of either fur or, as Rentner does it best, a jeweled turtle-neck vest of seed pearls and rhinestones. Suit collars are most often and becomingly faced with velvet, often in contrasting shades of, for instance, inky blue or emerald green and sanka brown on deep red.

And there will be much jewelry to toss around at random. Small jeweled clips on collars, on pocket-ends, on the cuffs of sleeves or worn in massive rhinestone dog collars with evening clothes. There is also beading, sequins and paillettes, appliques of lace on net or velvet or marquisette, knitted collars and cuffs on woolen suits and dresses and even quilted collar, cuffs and pocket flaps on a black silk crepe afternoon dress at Ben Reig's.

There will be skirts, overskirts, slit skirts, half skirts and underskirts that show, because first they are either a straight sheath of, say, lame worn under chiffon peignoir for evening or perhaps peacock blue crepe sheath under a black wool eyelet (wonderful) afternoon dress slit from the waistline down in front.

Also, you will find a strong suggestion of tunics, a few handkerchief pleatums and various sundry swags that append themselves over wide crushed waistbands and hang down like the floating panels of an earlier, though, not forgotten, season, or extend like a dropped sash from the front and tie in a low bow-knot in back or appear in the form of streamer bows, placed low to side back and side front that swing free like a pendulum.

And, although we hate to tell you, flounces are back—and front. Yes, these harbingers of periods of distress and hemline lengtheners are with us again. Monte-Sano did a pleated peplum around the hem of a black chiffon broadcloth cocktail suit and both Patullo and Rentner, Ben Reig and Blotta showed the flounce in some form or other, either as a bias circle around an entire hemline or as a diagonal piece across the back or front or extending from one side.

Clouds Help Wash

If the sun can't make up its mind about whether or not it should shine, and you can't make up your mind whether or not to wash the family laundry, go ahead and wash it. A day when the sun comes and goes is the best kind of wash-day for bleaching clothes on the line.

Lover's Quarrels Over Trifles Necessary To Avoid Monotony

By CAROL CUNNINGHAM

Thanks to centuries of veneration by non-lovers, the lover's quarrel has come to be regarded as the world's gayest form of entertainment, with the possible exception of television.

But not so for the lovers. They'd take Milton Berle to a melancholy melee any day in the week.

For newlyweds perhaps no experience of their young lives is so shattering as that first quarrel after the honeymoon. Nothing hurts quite so badly as an argument with a loved one, even if it's over something as trifling as whether or not to have tea or coffee for dinner. Yet the very fact that the quarrel is between lovers—two people who have lost their sense of humor and have developed instead a hypersensitivity to each other's feelings—makes the most minor disagreement assume ridiculous proportions.

When the first battle comes the bride is liable to view her husband as a heartless brute, while the man she lives with sees the little woman as a sharp-tongued shrew.

But the quarrels will come in the happiest love nest, and it's a good thing, too. They're natural, normal and even necessary to relieve the tension of too much tenderness. Even happiness can be monotonous and quarrels would be a good thing if all they accomplished was to keep life from being dull. Luckily, if handled right, they also lay the ground for a firmer understanding.

Perhaps the first move for newlyweds, when confronted with a quarrel, is to see the disagreement in its true light—as a normal occurrence when-they become chronic, there is always some reason, less obvious, but always of far greater proportions than the immediate quarrels would lead the couple to believe. These are the quarrels which should be taken seriously, and which should be resolved at their roots, once they are determined. As for those little squabbles which are just what they seem, they automatically dissolve when treated, as they deserve, with humor, patience and understanding.

And if these remedies are too much for the distraught bride or groom, there's another rule they can follow. Always give in on small matters. Hold out only on matters of principle.

Miss Smith To Be Married

CONYERS, July 11—Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Eugene Smith announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Smith, to Jack L. Meadows, of Covington, the marriage to be solemnized Saturday evening July 29, at the First Baptist Church here.

Miss Smith's mother is the former Miss Alice Gertrude Crumley, of Rockdale County. The bride-elect attended Bessie Tift College where she was pledged to Alpha Delta Iota, Delta Sigma Alpha sorority, and was a member of the Writers' Club. At present she is an elementary grade teacher of the Rockdale County Teachers' Association.

Mr. Meadows is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frank Meadows, of Covington, his mother having been before her marriage Miss Ila Kitchens, of Newton County. He attended North Georgia College where he was pledged to Sigma Theta fraternity, and belonged to the Science Club. At present Mr. Meadows is affiliated with his father in business.

ever two individuals try to live together.

The second move is to find the true cause of the argument. For arguments, unlike bubble dancers, aren't always thinly disguised, especially if they come with stormy regularity. A poor sex adjustment is the root of many a quarrel over something as far fetched as burnt biscuits. And jealousy or resentment toward in-laws may lead to an argument over religion or even politics—any field which the subconscious, however erroneously, may relate to the object of its jealousy and attack with attendant fury.

Certainly most quarrels can be taken at face value, but when

Homemaker Is Queen At National Trade Meet

By AGNES REASON OLMSTEAD
Constitution Home Economics Editor

BOSTON—American women would be quite pleasantly surprised if they could but listen to reports of how they have been surveyed, analyzed and studied all in order that business may better do things and make things to please them.

There's no doubt the homemaker is the queen at this pre-convention meeting of more than 300 home economists representing the major food, equipment and textile organizations in the United States.

One of the most revealing studies, which to date has been private, had to do with how women shop in grocery stores and what the grocer knows about us. Modern grocery stores have been planned to suit women and we've responded by spending about $1 billion dollars for food last year, said Walter Klauchfield, a representative of This Week magazine.

Prices can never go down to the good old 1929 level because fewer people are growing or producing food and more people are buying food, he said. There's been a great movement of people from farms to cities and there are more mouths to feed because of our great population increase.

Fashion and nutrition education have greatly affected food sales in the last 40 years. The consumption of fruits, vegetables and dairy foods have gone up because of their increased importance nutritionally and our feminine desire for slimmness. Wheat products, cereals, bread and potatoes have gone down during this period. Meat consumption stays about the same for we eat all we can produce. Women's desire to do one-stop shopping has been an incentive for grocers to add beauty and health items, small household appliances, candy and many other "revolutionary" products. There may have been another reason for candy for Mr. Klauchfield reported people consume more candy than they do coffee.

Grocery stores have just started to please us. Tests are under way on such conveniences as tall, lighted towers so Pop can easily spot the store you want him to stop in or so you can quickly locate it while driving in traffic; new mechanical check-out systems will entertain us as well as prevent queues, better product arrangement and improved distribution methods to get us food at its best are all part of this continuing research.

If you have ever wondered what home economists eat when they get together the answer is everything. We've had excellent food, beautifully served at very uniquely decorated tables.

Our New England brunch menu was iced fruit juice, scrambled eggs on thin country fried ham, giant Massachusetts asparagus, Vermont maple rolls and enormous fresh strawberries with yellow cream.

July 4 in New England means the serving of the traditional boiled salmon and peas. Luncheon Monday was planned to let us taste this superb combination. Our menu went like this: Fresh fruits supreme, the usual relishes, boiled Penobscot salmon with hot egg sauce, Maine parsley potatoes, green peas with parsley butter, tarragon dressed cucumbers, small crusty rolls, blueberry muffins and for dessert a sponge cake rolled with lemon milk sherbet fillings topped with crushed strawberries.

It's hard to tell the difference between luncheons and dinners in quantity. The official banquet meal was most generous. Minted melon balls, chilled Vichyssoise, relishes, cranberry orange relish, breast of chicken saute chasseur, string beans polonaise, summer squash and baskets of rolls. The dessert was a parade of flames in a completely darkened room. They said it was a specialty of this fine Copley Plaza Hotel, called bombe aranie with fresh raspberry sauce. To me it was just a calorie-packed ice cream dish.

Miss Earlene Moree Weds J. D. Green

ALBANY, July 11—Miss Earlene Moree, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Moree, and J. D. Green, son of Mrs. Maude C. Green, all of Albany, were recently married at the First Christian Church, with the pastor, Rev. W. G. Smedley, officiating.

The bride wore a white marquisette ballerina, and carried a white prayerbook topped with white orchids. Mrs. R. H. Dismuke was her sister's matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Mrs. Nan Gabaldron, another sister of the bride, and Miss Helen Tanner. A. D. McDearmid was best man, and usher—groomsmen were S. A. McDonald and Leonard McDonald.

STORK SET

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Bowman, III, of Wayzata, Minn., announce the birth of a son on July 10. Mrs. Bowman is the former Miss Wilmette Owens, of Atlanta and Miami Beach, Florida.

KISS ME AGAIN!

I'm twice as sweet as I was the night you skipped that good night kiss. I'll never let perspiration odor spoil another kiss—because I've found a totally new deodorant that's twice as good—in all these ways: It never irritates normal skin, and absolutely will not rot fabrics. It positively works—stops perspiration and odor for 24 hours. So easy to use, too! Just spray it on—banishes perspiration odor instantly! New Odo-Ro-No Spray Deodorant can't leak, can't break, can't fail! No more of those old ineffective deodorants for me. I'm using Odo-Ro-No Spray now on! (Be sure to ask for new Odo-Ro-No Spray Deodorant in the new jewel-like blue spray bottle, pre-tested to spray perfectly, at your toiletries counter in two sizes, 50¢ and 25¢ plus tax. Double your money back guarantee on every package. Northern Warren, New York.)

Miss Jeffreys Weds Atlantant

BETHESDA, Md., July 11—Miss Ann Lee Jeffreys, daughter of Lee Jeffreys, was married to Dr. Ernest William Beasley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Beasley, Sr., of Atlanta, Ga., at a recent ceremony solemnized at the Bethesda Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. James S. Alberson officiating.

Mr. Jeffreys gave his daughter in marriage, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Jeffreys was maid of honor. John J. Morgan, of Atlanta, served as best man.

The bride chose a gown of Chantilly lace, and an illusion veil which fell from a satin bonnet-shaped half-hat. She carried a bouquet of white roses. A reception at the Wardman Park Hotel followed the ceremony. The bridal couple left for a honeymoon at Ocracoke Island. They will reside in Atlanta.

Mrs. Beasley attended Wilson Teachers' College and the Lucy Webb Hayes School of Nursing. Dr. Beasley attended Emory University, Georgetown University School of Medicine, and interned at Walter Reed Hospital. During the war he served with the rank of captain in the Army Medical Corps.

new miracle pad deodorant WIPES AWAY ODOR-FORMING BACTERIA that other types of deodorants leave under your arms!

TEST X Purpose: Test of 5-DAY's action in removing odor-forming skin bacteria

Laboratory Proof

Test X: In this microscopic photo of a 5-Day Pad there are hundreds of thousands of odor-forming skin bacteria removed from under the arm. This is undeniable proof that when you use a 5-Day Pad you throw away with it hundreds of thousands of bacteria that are the main cause of perspiration odor. Other types of deodorants leave them under your arm.

TEST XX Purpose: Test of 5-DAY's perspiration effectiveness

No other deodorant is as effective in checking perspiration and stopping odor!

The miracle is in the pad! 5-Day Pads are circles of fabric saturated with refreshing, mild yet very effective deodorant. 5-Day's exclusive formula checks perspiration—stops odor longer.

Safely checks perspiration more effectively, too! Contains twice* as much active anti-perspirant than an average of leading brands tested. Yet, laboratory pH tests prove 5-Day milder—harmless to skin and clothes.

The miracle is in the pad! When you throw away the used 5-Day Pad, you throw away with it hundreds of thousands of odor-producing skin bacteria that other types of deodorants would leave under your arms.

Greater reserve protection! Laboratory tests show that hours after application 5-Day's exclusive formula is 8 times* more effective in keeping you safe from underarm odor than an average of leading brands tested. No other deodorant or deodorant soap can keep you so safe from underarm odor—so long.

The miracle is in the pad! Far cleaner. Far more convenient than deodorants that must be applied with fingers—with sprays—or in other hit-or-miss ways. No fuss. No mess. No mess. The perfect way to apply a deodorant.

First time you try 5-Day Deodorant Pads you'll say that it's the greatest improvement in deodorants since the first effort to banish underarm odor.

*All comparative figures mentioned in this ad are based on the average of laboratory tests of leading deodorants.

Keep Teeth in Best Condition After Forty

The first thing to do after forty, if, like most Yankee Wiseacres, you have neglected proper care of your teeth in your preoccupation with trick brushes and glorified soap, is to have your teeth put in the best possible working order. This involves making and installing whatever dentures may be necessary or practicable to replace missing teeth.

It has cost me many a new reader to say this. Moreover it is not in line with the character assigned to me by some of the throw-away "magazines" that tell the second-rate dentists what to think of me and my column. In Seven Keys to Vite (for copy send 25 cents and stamped self-addressed envelope) you will find Save Your Teeth is No. 1 key.

It should be obvious to even the dumbest dentist, that I place a high value on teeth, either natural teeth or artificial teeth, that function well, and that I have great respect for good dentistry. It is the first thing I think of when I think of keeping well, preserving the characteristics of youth and holding back the encroachment of senility. It is still the first thing I think of when I think of preventing physical degeneration and the manifestations thereof—such as rheumatism, cardiovascular breakdown (heart-artery wearing out) and diabetes.

Laundrying Helps Girdle Condition

Your girdle may be like your second skin—and that in itself is good enough reason for washing it often. Twice a week isn't too often to give it a good washing, for it is perspiration rather than laundrying which deteriorates the rubber.

Regular laundrying keeps your garment in good shape, figuratively speaking.

Whether yours is a flyweight girdle or an intricate two-in-one construction, it has three materials to consider: fabric, elastic, metal. Heat is an enemy to elastic; so avoid scalding water, radiator drying or hanging in the sun. Wringers can twist boning and break zippers if caught at the wrong angle.

Turn garment inside out to wash. Hook or zipper up all openings.

Water should be lukewarm. No water softener is needed if an all-purpose special detergent is used as suds-maker. Two tablespoons to a gallon of water makes a good rich suds. Squeeze suds through garment. Never friction-rub or twist. For especially soiled areas, rub granules right onto the fabric. An old handbrush grown soft in service is especially good for scrubbing the elastic webbing.

If you prefer a washing machine to hand washing, first "spot clean" soiled areas with brush and thick suds.

Rinse in lukewarm water. Squeeze out the water—never wring. Because detergents create no scum, there are none of those gray flecks that cling through repeated rinsings.

Roll garment in bath towel and knead gently to remove moisture. Smooth garment into shape. Dry by hanging horizontally on line or towel bar; or spread on terry towel; stuff with tissue to speed drying.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Latta have returned from a visit to New York City.

Mrs. Knowles Youngblood is recovering from a recent operation at Piedmont Hospital.

tiz, cardiovascular breakdown (heart-artery wearing out) and diabetes.

Casual readers may try to deceive themselves that it is quixotic to appraise each functioning tooth at a minimum of $1,000, but call me Quixote if it is.

The value of a tooth that functions efficiently, whether it is a natural tooth or one made and installed by your dentist, lies in the part each sound tooth plays in digestion and nutrition.

Even Yankee Wiseacres have some vague conception of the relation of health to good digestion, although they do not seem to realize that health depends on good digestion.

Few educated Americans are aware that the digestion of cooked starch begins in the mouth and continues normally for an hour or more in the upper or larger end (fundus) of the stomach after the food has been swallowed.

This is physiology, not almanac stuff. If the diet is pap, soft stuff, mainly refined carbohydrate, this important digestive process fails from disuse because one can't masticate such mushy or semifluid stuff with any satisfaction. Consequently the digestion of starch, which requires a good start in the mouth and an hour or so of further help in the stomach, is left entirely to the pancreas—pancreatic juice contains an enzyme called amylase which acts on starch in the intestine, much as ptyalin in the saliva acts on starch in mouth and stomach.

When the digestion of starch (in breadstuffs, cereals, vegetables, cake, pie) is thus constantly shifted to the pancreas, is it any wonder that there are more than a million diabetics and probably more than thirty million potential diabetics in this country today?

General Tendencies—Here is a pleasant and congenial day when everyone will be inclined to talk over a lot of new plans, yet few will be willing to do the spade work necessary to action. If your big ideas end in small detailed jobs, don't be disappointed because you probably will do everything pleasant and efficiently. This date favors people born in June and may stimulate correspondence or travel which would help their interests and money matters.

If It's Your Birthday—There are plenty of opportunities headed in your direction all during the next 12 months. Temperamentally, you often pass things up and then regret your decisions later on; don't be afraid of starting new ventures this year. Maybe the Fall months will not be too lively or profitable but the late Winter and the Spring of 1951 should be excellent. You may even consider domestic changes or find yourself a new sweetheart.

On the surface it may appear that the scope of the opening leader is limited to a great extent by restrictions contained in the printed table of leads. In point of fact, this phase of the game provides wide opportunities for the exercise of flights of imagination. A splendid illustration is provided by today's hand in which West reaped a reward well merited by his combination of boldness and wit.

Today's bidding was natural enough and West was called upon to make the opening lead, with prospects none too bright. In cases of this sort, the opening lead should be selected by the process of elimination. An immediate veto had to be placed on the diamond suit which contained the major tenace. The lead of the heart with the hope of hitting partner's suit was not very attractive, because even if it happened to be in the right direction, it could not be followed up. The spade, having been adversely bid, offered not much in that suit to establish.

Despite the opening bid of the suit, it appeared that if the hand could not be beaten with clubs, there was no hope at all. The selection of the card to lead was the point of outstanding interest. West decided on the abnormal lead of the queen. The text book lead from this combination is the 10. His reasoning for departure from the normal was as follows: "If declarer has the ace, king, and jack, it will make no difference, but if I am lucky enough to pick up a singleton jack in either dummy or partner's hand, the result would be very gratifying.

The actual result is quite evident. Declarer could not bring in the hand without resort to the diamond suit and West was unable to establish the clubs, while he still held entry. Note how different would have been the result with a low club lead. Declarer's proper play is to permit the jack to hold the trick, and now West cannot establish his clubs until after both diamond entries have been taken from him.

You, too, can add new life to your home with WYNNFLO ALUMINUM AWNINGS. These popular new lifetime aluminum awnings enhance its beauty and charm, provide year-round weather protection, give you cool, summer comfort and years of trouble-free service . . . all at competitive, "discount" prices! Whether your home is in the $5,000 to $50,000 group, you can be proud of beautiful, practical WYNNFLO ALUMINUM AWNINGS.

The R. L. Johnson home
BEFORE Wynnflo
Aluminum Awnings were installed.

WYNNFLO ALUMINUM AWNINGS, made of individual strips of highest grade aluminum in popular new narrow strips, cannot trap hot air underneath (as so many one-piece awnings do) because they are made with patented vent construction.

WYNNFLOs are ideal for porches, doorways, windows, terraces and patios, and come in your selection of sparkling baked-enamel color combinations. WYNNFLOs are manufactured and sold only by the KOOLVENT METAL AWNING COMPANY, one of the oldest and largest metal awning firms in America!

Korea, War III? Topic on WSB-TV

By PAUL JONES

Is Korea the key to World War III?

Four authorities on world developments and the Korean situation will attempt to provide the correct answer to that question at 9 Wednesday night, when WSB-TV focuses its cameras on Ralph McGill, Editor of The Constitution; Wright Bryan, Editor of The Journal; Capt. Henry Hackney, former member of the American Military Government in Seoul, and Walter Paschal, WSB News Editor.

Paschal will open the forum with a summary of events leading up to the present Far East crisis and a report on the latest developments South of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Variety is not only the spice of life, but it also is the key to the success of one of WSB-TV's most delightful shows, Open House.

Mary Nell Ivey will play host at 8 to a foursome whose vocations and avocations are widely separated. Paul Weir, of Atlanta Water Department; Mary Ann Smith, who will do a pantomime to records; Eli Frisch, who displays comic reactions to certain situations, and Mrs. Sarah Wheeler, who will model a

Market Flies Off In All Directions

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—The stock market rode off in all directions Tuesday.

Price movements were based chiefly on a rich mixture of rumor, fear and hope. They held up fairly well, closing with top gains of about $1 a share.

A climax was reached in the last half hour of trading when a wave of selling minutes before the final bell sounded, demand revived and most shares closed above the lows of the day.

On average the market was down sharply. Four of the five down actively. At the close the ticker was six minutes late.

Sales ballooned to 3,250,000 shares, largest in two weeks, from 1,980,000 Monday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped 9 of one point at 72.4, a low since late January.

The industrial and utility groups showed heavy losses but rails managed a small net gain.

The market was comparatively narrow in view of the rapid turnover. A total of 1,140 individual stocks changed hands, of which 580 declined and 382 advanced.

New lows for 1950 were touched during the day by more than 150 stocks.

Rumors of the possibility of a new deal, pushed the market down. Others said the rumors were a sustaining influence on prices. The rumors, widespread in the financial district, had a somewhat flimsy base: Soviet Foreign Minister Jakob Malik had announced plans to return to Moscow and London announced that the British ambassador in Moscow had a second talk with Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on a possible settlement of the Korean conflict.

Traders, in short, were operating in the dark, governed more by guesswork and emotions than by facts.

Until the antics of the last half hour, the market was characterized by highly selective buying and selling.

Railroad issues pounded in front of the day, gaining an outsize of $3 a share at one time.

UNICORN PRESS, INC.

WORTH
$5.00

When you receive your book, take it to your local book store. Compare it with any other volume in the store. You'll quickly agree that books made like this sell for $5.00 or more!

YES, it's free — absolutely free — this beautiful and important volume worth $5.00 and more! All you need do to receive it is send us your name and address on the coupon below — and that is all. There are no strings or catches to this amazing offer. You do not have to buy anything or do anything except ask for the book — and it is YOURS!

Merely send in the coupon below, and by return mail you receive this wonderful volume, containing 2000 fascinating articles on 2000 important subjects. It contains hundreds of biographies of important men, such as John and Samuel Adams, Alexander the Great, Louis Agassiz, Ethan Allen, and Prince Albert. It contains articles on such broad subjects as Advertising, Agriculture, Accounting, and the Airplane. It has articles on continents such as Africa, and North and South America, on countries such as Alaska, Albania, Afghanistan, and the Aleutian Islands, and cities such as Algiers, Aleppo and Alexandria. It has scientific articles on such topics as Alcohol, Acetylene, Ambergris, Acid, Aluminum, Allergy, and Alkaloids. There are articles on people such as Aborigines, American Indians, Albinos, and Ainus. There are articles on animals such as Abalone, Alpaca, Alligator, Adder, Albatross, Agouti, and the Aardvark and Aardwolf. There are hundreds upon hundreds more articles on such absorbing topics as Alchemy, American Literature, Alexander Legend, Americanisms, Alphabet, Achean Civilization, Almanac, and Abolitionists.

The volume contains nearly a quarter of a million words — the size of three ordinary books! There are pictures on nearly every page to illustrate the text, some of them in brilliant full color, and a 32-page Hammond Atlas in four colors of every country and state in the Western Hemisphere. You will find interest and pleasure, and an enormous amount of educational information in its four-hundred-odd, double-columned pages.

The book itself is beautifully made. It has features found only in expensive DeLuxe editions of other sets of books. It is bound in high quality, closely woven tan cloth. Decorative head and tailbands are added. The stamping is in bright red and black with titles and decorative material in genuine 22-karat gold — long lasting and untarnishing. The marbled end papers in full color, the heavy, creamy-smooth paper of the pages, the extra-heavy covers — all combine to make a volume of exceptional beauty and wearing quality. Here is a book you will be proud to place on a bookshelf or library table — proud to own.

And it is yours, as our gift, just for the asking! Read below why we are extending to you this astonishing privilege.

OFFER OF ONLY
1000 COPIES

The publishers reserve the right to limit the number to be given away through this announcement to 1000 copies. In addition, only one book may be requested by any one family. So don't miss out. Send off the coupon right away. Tomorrow may be too late!

Why We Give You This Valuable 424-Page Book Free!

WHY do we wish to give you this marvelous volume, worth $5.00 or more? The answer is very simple.

The book we are willing to give you is Volume I of a brand-new, 36-volume encyclopedia, the finest ever compiled for home and family use — the NEW FUNK & WAGNALLS ENCYCLOPEDIA.

For over five years now a large staff of scholars worked to bring this great work into living reality — aided by famous authorities in every field of learning, by public and private institutions of every kind, and by the agencies of our own and foreign governments.

A year ago publication of the volumes finally began, acclaimed by educational authorities and critics all over the country.

Their acclaim was not only for the supremely authoritative contents of this magnificent new, twentieth-century encyclopedia, but for its PRICE — which is so amazingly low that before long every library and school, every wide-awake and forward-looking American family will be the proud possessor of a set. And their acclaim was also for a unique method of distribution — the delivery of only three volumes a month, as the books come off press — and the payment for each three volumes only AFTER delivery. By that combination of incredibly low price and method of delivery, it is possible for the first time in history for EVERY family to own a superlatively good encyclopedia.

We are absolutely sure that if you could only SEE and EXAMINE one of the volumes, you would want to own the whole set, for your own sake, and for your home and family.

We decided that the best way to give you that opportunity is to present you with one of the volumes as an OUTRIGHT GIFT. Of course the free volume we want to send you is a very important and useful book in itself. Remember — it is ABSOLUTELY FREE, and in accepting it you are under no obligation whatsoever to buy any other volumes, or anything at all.

Enclosed with your free book will come descriptive literature telling you the price and method of delivery of the rest of the set, should you decide you want the other volumes. Also enclosed will be a fascinating booklet "The Story of an Encyclopedia," telling you the story of how this encyclopedia came to be created, and how it compares with other encyclopedias. You will want this free booklet in any event, as a dependable guide, to show you what to look for in an encyclopedia.

Enclosed also will be a postcard which we will ask you to fill in and send back to us after you have examined your gift volume. The postcard is merely a form by which you can order the rest of the set if you choose — or else tell us you do not want any other volumes.

THAT IS ALL! There are no tricks or catches to this amazing gift offer. If, after you get your free book, and read all about the set, you decide AGAINST buying any other books, no one will urge you to change your mind; no one will call on you or write you letters trying to persuade you. WE TAKE THE GAMBLE in giving you the free book, and you gamble nothing, and you get a $5.00 book for nothing.

That's fair enough, isn't it? But please be fair to us in return. If for some reason you are now sure you will not want an encyclopedia, no matter how low-priced or how marvelous it is, please do not send for the free Volume I. These are expensive books, of which we have only a limited supply, and these should go to people who are genuinely interested in owning a wonderful encyclopedia — and to nobody else.

I am genuinely interested in owning a fine encyclopedia, if I can buy it at a price which is just a fraction of its real value.

Please send me, absolutely free, Volume I of the 36-volume New Funk & Wagnalls Encyclopedia. Please also send me information concerning the price and method of delivery of other volumes of the set, and the valuable free booklet "The Story of an Encyclopedia."

After I have examined my gift volume, I will send back to you the postcard you will enclose, to tell you whether I want to buy the rest of the set or not.

It is understood that in accepting the gift volume I am under no obligation whatsoever to buy any other volumes, or to make any payment whatsoever. The Volume I and the booklet are ABSOLUTELY FREE.
